WHEAT QUOTA VOTE.

It would have been surprising indeed if the vote on wheat acreage allotments had been different than it was. In fact, it was surprising that it was so close and that the eastern states voted against it. Such controls must make diversified farm planning difficult but the reductions do not effect those growing less than 15 acres so it was presumed that those farmers would oppose.

If senators quit talking it may be possible to pass a farm bill in this session, otherwise it is doubtful. It may be necessary to agree on other legislation than the atomic bill—on which they are filibustering—to get the gablest closed. There may be no farm bill.

The vote makes it more important than ever that there be some new farm legislation. Farmers would not approve another cut in acreage if the recent vote is an indication of the rate of change of opinion.

We have long needed a new farm program to replace the one that was made for wartime and almost unlimited demand for wheat and cotton and corn and the smaller—although called basic—crops of tobacco and rice.

Among the features a new farm bill requires is provisions to encourage better marketing of crops, security for efficient farmers, assurance of sufficient production.

The present farm bill succeeds only in the last one. Cost is only a minor factor because the price of the raw material made on the farms is no longer much of a factor in the retail price of food. It is a factor in the price of feed.

History teaches that whatever approach is used to write a new farm bill it will not be satisfactory to all parts of the country or growers of all crops. We may have a wheat bill, a cotton bill, a corn bill. And we will have to amend it. No man or no group has been, or is, smart enough to write a perfect farm bill. Such things (if there be such things) come from growth, not from inspiration.

For that reason we would like to see a start made.

HOW DO THE MEN GET ALONG?

There are some statistics that show that women own 80 percent of the money. That leaves a mere 20 percent for the men and we assume that there are almost as many men as women. The census gives the women a majority in numbers largely because they live longer than men—a matter that has not been adequately explained either.

So if there are only a few more women and they have four-fifths of the money how do the men get along and still afford to go on fishing trips, buy those fancy Hawaiian shirts, drive cars and hoist a few at the bars.

The statistics must mean that women control 80 percent of the accumulated wealth. That could be for the reason that they live longer and the men give them the money in return for the traditional "love and affection" as the will-writers style it.

It may be time for men to begin thinking about some reformation in the social system of spending. If the gals have all the dough why not let them buy the drinks.

Now maybe coffee will get to be cheaper than milk. Odd, isn't it that milk has to compete with coffee, tea, beer, coke, when it is both cheaper and better.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

"Browser's" License

"Specs" Johnson, who thinks it's a real treat to spend an hour or so browsing in a bookshop found his idea of heaven up in Centerville last week.

"Just inside the door," Specs says, "there's a tray of bright blue buttons. If you want to look around without having someone suggest you buy the latest best-selling novel, or maybe a history of Africa, you pin a button on your coat lapel."

"You can poke around all you like. Then when you've found the book you want, take off the button, and someone's right there to take care of you."

From where I sit, everybody likes to make his own choice. It doesn't matter whether it's books, or preferences in clothing or makes of cars. And it's no surprise that folks have personal preferences in beverages, too. So if your neighbor orders a glass of beer while you're having coffee, remember he's entitled to his choice, too.

Just give him the cold facts, ma'am—tell him you want a freezer right now!

That's all that should be necessary. Just the facts. Like these: An electric food freezer will help you provide better food for your family. It will give you the luxury of farm-and-garden-fresh foods at your fingertips all year long. You'll shop by the season, not by the day or week. A freezer lets you reduce food costs as much as one-third by taking advantage of once-a-year low prices on your favorite fresh foods. It makes getting a meal quick and easy. These are the facts every husband should know. Be sure yours does. Tell him today.

It takes only about 15¢ worth of electricity a week to bring you all the benefits of a freezer, here where the cost of electric service is less than half the national average.
