The answers to everyday insurance problems*
By Frank Ketter
*If you'll address your own insurance questions to this office, we'll try to give you the correct answers and there will be no charge or obligation of any kind.

QUESTION: Suppose a driver hits his brakes so hard he wears flats spots on all his tires trying to avoid a collision. Shouldn't the insurance company pay for the tire damage? After all, the driver has probably saved the company a big collision repair bill.

ANSWER: The answer is probably "no". Tires are worn a bit every time a stop is made and if insurance companies paid for that damage there would be a million arguments as to degree of damage and whether or not the damage was necessary in avoiding a collision.
