Millionaire Box Maker Sighs Over Post Career

Container Corp. Director Man Who Made America Really Prefers Music

By LOUIS JAMES

Freddie Rand Mann is a multimillionaire who can't buy the one thing he wants most.

He is an individual, a human dynamo, a leader, leader, philanthropist and musician.

As president of the National Container Corp. of America, he has amassed a fortune in numerous ways to benefit himself and his fellow-men.

But there is one thing he can never buy—a post career.

Born in Russia, brought here at the age of two, he had been happily preparing for the concert stage when, suddenly, at 15, a car rammed into his bike, broke both shoulders and robbed him of his career—in music.

What music lost, however, business gained.

First, though, he took to books and study. Possessed of a crack-brain mind, he breezed through Yale's tough entrance exams to become, at 15, one of its youngest students.

Two years later he quit to study at Philadelphia's Wharton School of Business with the idea of a Wall Street career before him.

At 19, he was earning $100 a week with a paper concern and three years later he became the firm's treasurer. In 1930 he founded the National Container Corp. of Pennsylvania, with his own and some borrowed capital.

In the middle of the depression, at the age of 26, Mann was busy operating a million dollar company.

"I read and studied constantly," he said. "Anything to do with economics—business papers, the Wall Street Journal, magazines, news letters—things that kept me abreast of economic twists and turns."

Though he loved the tempo of big business, his ear was always tuned to the rhythms of music.

A dedicated art collector

He collected records and art. His Philadelphia home is a veritable gallery and he is equally at home with Stravinsky or Gershwin, Picasso or Matisse as well as with stocks and bonds.

A few years ago Mann took his money, plans and energy and placed them at the disposal of the city of Philadelphia. Just like that, Philadelphia liked the idea.

They immediately appointed him Commissioner of Recreation, a new post; he helped write the City's new charter and then moved into local government as an adviser and planner. In 1955 he also became Director of Commerce and City Representative.

Worried by the off-key financial noises emanating from the Robin Hood Dell, the city-run concerts, Mann took over in 1948 and inside of a year put it squarely in the black.

He did more than that—he took the concerts away from the "charitable trade" and brought it right into the laps of the people.

Concerts at low cost

Now, Philadelphians can see and hear the world's best orchestras and soloists at an average-admission fee which cannot be duplicated anywhere—one and a half cents a concert!

Continental boundaries, however, do not limit his interests. This year Mann was hailed by the Israel Government for leadership in building a $2 million, 3000-seat music hall, finest in the Middle East. In gratitude, Israel has named it The Freddie R. Mann Auditorium.

Today, he has retired from actively making paper containers and has resumed his one-time hobby—touring abroad in search of new musical talent to help become Mann's vision—a rainbow dream come true.
