HERE WE GO

The financial pundits who write for the magazines and letters to subscribers say that we are going to go right on inflating the currency until the dollar is worth less and less.

We don't know how accurate are those writers but there is certainly a strain of pessimism in them. They go on to say that this is the time to go into debt because debt made now can be paid off with cheaper money. There is too much unanimity in what they say to be taken lightly.

Reasons are bigger federal expenditures for defense and for everything else, too, congressmen being engaged in getting appropriations for more and more things; labor's program of getting more and more money for less and less work and business demand for more money. And, of course, a general laxity and desire for "jush one more drink."

Government is apparently like drunks in that the leaders believe they can handle inflation as a drinker thinks he can handle another drink, no matter how far gone is either.

In the face of this colossal ignorance the citizen can prepare himself by getting ahold of tanible property in the form of land, houses, or common stocks. The failure of the Republicans to stop the trend after the Democrats started it and let it run after the war gives the citizen little hope of help from politics.

LABOR BILL

Congress may, or may not, pass the labor bill it has been working on for months. It makes little difference except politically. The Demcorats want to pass some kind of a bill so they can point to it as an accomplishment and show that they are entirely pro-labor. The Republicans hope it will not pass so they can point to the opposite. No one is much interested in the contents of the bill.

That is easy to say because there really isn't much in the bill. It would make it a little harder for labor leaders to cheat members on pension funds and it would require a lot of reports.

When the power of labor bosses is considered the citizen may wonder why some legislation isn't passed to curb it. George Meany, head of the AFL-CIO would welcome some disciplinary action but others have not joined him and congressmen are scared of labor. Labor is much the largest bloc of voters that can be pressured into voting for or against a candidate. Not that all laborers are so servile to the bosses but all hear the story and a good majority follow the leader.

We constantly hear that we can't do anything about labor as long as we have representative government and also that we can't do anything about spending. If that be the case—and we doubt it—speed the revolution.
