

What they did,
And how, and why,
and what the neighbors said-

Days are warm, not really hot, fine threshing weather and that is just what the farmers are using it for. And those not threshing can like the weather if they want to run around in their skins, which is what some of them are doing. Brown skins, mostly.

T. Lester Johnson is making one of his frequent trips to Pen d'Oreille, up in Idaho, where the fish are big and hungry, a nice combination and not often found in these times when so many live in the cities so unappetizingly that they want to get out in the country again and use fishing for an excuse.

Mac Bull decided the time was ripe for him to burn some weeds around his old place on Railroad avenue the first of the week. The weather was a little warm, the weeds a little dry and the fire covered more ground than Mac intended before the siren called some townsmen together to put it out.

Bill Bleker and family are back from their trip to British Columbia where they fished and cooled off at the 100 Mile House above Cache Creek.

A grass fire burned over the hills of the Deschutes on the Wasco side from Oakbrook to a spot across from the tunnel through the lower horseshoe bend Sunday afternoon causing a lot of smoke and some excitement among the railroad crews in charge of keeping trains running.

Farmers in town in a clean shirt and a contented expression are the ones who have finished harvest. There is a pleasant period then of catching up on sleep, kidding the slower neighbors and computing the income that, especially in a year like this, adds to the joy of life.

A crew of state highway men are planting grass on the banks and fills along Highway 97 and the new Bull Canyon-John Day river stretch of 206. They work early in the day before the wind comes up.

Mike Haggerty, assistant co-ordinator for the centennial commission, stopped in town Wednesday with a couple of army discharges for John Weil from the Seventh U. S. Cavalry, which was Custer's outfit. Weil ended a five year enlistment just in time to miss the massacre at Big Horn in 1876. Haggerty also had an old Wade & Butcher razor, said to have been used by General Custer. Still sharp, too.

Kelly Wilson is home again after his hitch in the army including service in Korea. Says he'd just as soon harvest as soldier.

County Agents Tommy Thompson and Carol Armstrong went to Pendleton Thursday for a two day workshop. She will hurry home in order to meet her parents Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Armstrong and son Neal, who are coming from Redwing, Minn., for a ten day visit in the west.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Henkle come home Wednesday from a vacation spent at Devil's Lake with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hennagin and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hennagin and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hennagin.

A drivers license examiner will be on duty in Moro Wednesday, July 30, at the courthouse between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m.

Tom and Dick Barnum are guests this week of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kurilo and family of Portland.
