DAYLIGHT SAVING

We think it possible and we certainly hope that advocates of fast time have overplayed their hand. At the very next legislative session after the people had steadfastly refused to adopt fast time legislators made it possible by municipal enactment. That was a much more reversal of the public will than was the vote on the bill to relieve big trucks from taxes.

The legislative enactment has made those who voted for fast time a little angry for some of them cherish the authority of their votes more than the questionable advantage of quitting an hour early. Those who would trade a bright, fresh morning hour for a hot, jaded afternoon, are a little hard to convince. But they still want their votes to be respected by legislators.

Otherwise the late unlamented legislature wasn't so bad, but the best thing about it was the things it didn't do. It passed almost half the bills introduced which is not necessarily bad. In relation to what was proposed that it do the do-nothing policy was best.

However, we expect that it will go down in history as the legislature that defeated the people's will about fast time and to suffer the dislike resultant from that arrogant act.

IS IT SPRING?

This week the weather suddenly became warm thus making true the prophecy of old timers who said it would get warm sometime. They were beginning to get doubtful themselves. The way to have the weather seem perfect is to have a long spell of weather that has nothing perfect about it. This spring has been like that.

Wheat farmers have no complaint for wheat grows well when the sky is clouded when it rains day after day, when the wind blows steadily across the landscape. Although wheat will jump a seeming inch a day in this warm sunshine it suffers no harm from cold, inclement weather. Try it sometime; lie close to the ground and see how little the wind blows.

Now the late sown gardens will burgeon, the radishes almost pop their red skins, the peas bloom and the potatoes come, as hesitantly as a maiden, from the warming ground. Long frustration makes a garden grow faster to catch up, sometimes almost fast enough to satisfy the gardener.

The better weather has a wide influence. It is much nicer living when everybody says "Isn't this a fine day?" instead of grunting a few sounds of disgust from the depths of their discomfort. Humans should not be subjected to such long misery. Even with warmed houses, closed cars and adequate clothing the grouse and gripe until their very souls are warped. It is but natural and the rare few who wear a cherry smile and speak a kind word when their backbone is shaking like a bare tree limb in the wind can seldom be found.

We are nappy with these few days of good weather even though we are condemned to sit inside and watch it from a distance. We can discern its effects from the countenances of our visitors.

NO NO NO

An advertising out of one those firms that persistently sends pictures and advertising materials to newspapers, comes forth with an ad for something or other in which is pictures of a man fishing with his hands in his pockets and a cigar in his mouth and an expression so inattentive as to make the whole thing absurd.

Fishermen pay attention to their business. There may be men along streams who let their mind wander and think about business or the girl next door but they are not playing the role of fisherman at the time. A fisherman thinks about fish.

Neither do many fisherman smoke cigars. A cigar is a smoke that should be indulged in at ease, in relaxation, at the end of the day. A cigar is entirely too fragile to stand the movements of a nervous or occupied man. It becomes chewing tobacco or the flimsy wrapper comes loose and makes it pipe tobacco.

And fishermen do not put their hands in their pockets. That is a gesture of relaxation. No man at attention stuffs his hands into his pockets. You can spot the amateurs in a corral of livestock because they are the ones with their hands in their pockets. No stockman is going to deprive himself of his primary defense by stuffing them in pockets.

Fishermen smoke pipes, are interested in what they are doing and are alert to the next step that may be required at a signal from the other end of the line.

That advertising outfit needs some advice which we shall not give.

NOT CRAZY

Congressman Walter Norblad of Oregon's First district which is northwest Oregon sends out questionnaires to his constituents now and then to find out what they are thinking. The voters are usually sound in the head which means that they oppose most of the expensive schemes concocted by the bureaucracy for the care and feeding of bureaucrats.

The latest shows First district voters favoring health service to the aged through an added social security tax although the vote was 49.5 percent to 47.3 percent. Elders might well be for this for they get the care while workers pay for it.

Assistance to depressed areas got a 41.3 percent Yes vote and 48.0 No. Federal aid for school construction received 40.7 percent Yes and 55.7 No and Federal aid for teacher's pay had 19.2 percent Yes and 73.1 percent No.

Those questioned opposed the boost of minimum wages to $1.25 an hour by a substantial margin and were dead set against new public housing programs. There were some no opinion votes in each case.

It would be appropriate to recommend that federal legislation be left to the voters instead of the congress.

Thousands Go In Search of Game

Hunting and fishing—probably the most popular participating outdoor recreation in Oregon—lured thousands of new recruits to the lakes, streams, and forests of the state during the past year, boosting the total number of hunters and fishermen to an all-time high.

License receipts show a grand total of 643,724 general hunting and fishing licenses issued last year breaking the record of 625,465 licenses issued in 1959.

Phil Schneider, state game director, said that increases in the number of daily angling licenses issued, a moderate rise in the sale of general hunting and fishing licenses, plus a growing popularity in big game hunting are responsible for the overall increase in license sales.

Tabulation of the license sales shows that fishermen again liked the daily angling license with just over 104,500 of the daily permits issued compared to just under 104,000 the previous year.

The total number of anglers licensed to fish in Oregon waters, including 111,898 combination license holders, numbered just over 346,400, compared to 337,000 in 1959. This figure does not include the daily permits issued to tourists, vacationers, and the occasional angler may have purchased more than one of these licenses.

Salmon and steelhead anglers numbered 172,270 as shown by the sale of the salmon license required by anglers for the first time last year. Since this license is supplemental to one of the regular angling licenses, just as a deer or elk tag is supplemental to a regular hunting license for those who wish to hunt big game, these licenses are not included in the total general angling license sales.

Licensed hunters, including the combination license holders, numbered slightly over 104,600 compared to just over 295,000 in 1959. The sale of resident hunting licenses increased from just over 177,000 to 185,000 last year. Non-residents and juvenile hunters declined slightly.

The number of deer hunters took a substantial climb upward as shown by the sale of almost 15,000 deer tags above the 1959 sale. A total of 268,420 deer tags was issued compared to 153,698 the previous year. Elk hunting also tempted almost 5,000 more hunters to this rugged game with a climb in elk tag sales from the record of just over 44,200 in 1959 to 49,116 this past season.

Teacher Learns a Lesson

Fuzzy Goodwin may hold a half-dozen important positions around town—chairman of the school board included—but he's still the same modest fellow that I grew up with.

At the last PTA meeting, Fuzzy made a point of getting together with some new teachers. One of them, a lady with some strong ideas about education claimed that none of the others had gone to the right college—hers.

"Well, Miss, that isn't so bad," Fuzzy told her. "One of our board members didn't even go to high school, let alone college." "No! Who?" she said. "Me," he said.

From where I sit, some of us want people to be carbon copies of ourselves. But that just isn't the American way. Our heritage of freedom implies the right to be different, even in little things—like your choice of tea or coffee and my preference of a glass of beer. I say "be yourself" and no "studying up" to be like each other.
