NO TAMMANY FOR TEXAS
Although the papers said there was a chance that Republican Tower could be elected senator from Texas it sounded like one of those speculative things that almost never happen. But it did. Nothing could give as much heart to the conservatives of this nation who have been able to see the disastrous end of the "news", the new deal, the new whatever Truman had and the new frontier. Their strength came in the thirties when many Americans got scared and lost their faith in America and went traipsing off after the false gods of dictatorship and bureaucracy with their resultant lack of responsibility for the citizen. The United States recovered in spite of all the foolish programs.

The young people who decided that America was such a bad place that it would have to be made over are still apologetic for their actions and some are still a little boastful. An Oregon jury refused to convict a woman on a charge of libeling one of the wildest of these unfaithful. Their trouble was that they had no faith in anything but their own infallibility. To them our republic was wrong, our capitalistic system was wrong and many of them looked rather longingly to the system used in Russia where the people didn't have to think—and had better not.

But now a Republican has been elected senator from Texas, a very conservative Republican who beat a very conservative Democrat. Surely the Democrat had the support of Lyndon Johnson and Sam Rayburn and the backing of the Tammany hall type politics now being put into vogue. Oh! Happy Day. Maybe now there will be a slow down in the rush for more inflation, more government, more taxes, more screwball schemes, more citizen coddling. It would be heartening if America would turn American.

UNEMPLOYMENT

It is always discouraging to be out of a job; that is, if you want to work. It isn't so bad being out of work if unemployment compensation is sufficient for one's needs which we suspect is the case. High wages thus cause unemployment for some workmen pile up a nice nest-egg and are easily made unhappy on the job so they become unemployed, maybe by quitting, maybe by striking, maybe by sick leave. Anyway they don't work and are technically unemployed. The old work was "Stakey".

In these days of unemployment compensation no one has to go to a distant job until he has used up his rocking chair money. By then he may be out of the habit of working. Nearly everyone registers for work so he can draw pay as soon as enough work has been done for qualification. Women and kids just out of school add to the unemployment rolls.

The records do not show how many who are out of work are happy about that fact. Wages are high enough that the man with modest wants can get along by working part time and drawing unemployment compensation the remainder of the time. High wages make the compensation higher and the rest longer.

If we had a depression that lasted long enough to use up all the compensation and make void the minimum wage rates nearly everyone would work, would have to. But the nation would get things done, houses painted, rochets launched, buildings put up and we would have growth such as we are denied under present conditions.

DOUBLE TAXATION

When this administration proposed its elimination of the small exemption from dividend taxation it started a new discussion of federal taxation of corporate income that seems destined to defeat the proposal and may become sufficiently strong to make more equitable the taxation of income from corporations. It must be understood that if there is to be private business in this country someone must put some money into it. Whether a man takes his savings and invests it in a small grocery store or in a small repair business or if he buys stocks in a corporation some money is required. Most stockholders have but a few shares.

As at present corporations pay 52 percent of their incomes to the federal government, a little more than a half. A firm that makes $100,000 pays $52,000, right off the top. It distributes what is left to its stockholders who then pay taxes on it. That is at least 20 percent more if they are in a tax paying bracket.

Efforts of corporations to make enough money to hold their stockholders are certainly a major cause of high prices, perhaps the biggest reason for high prices. There must be stockholders because no one family and certainly no individual could even establish a corporation big enough to win a national market. Stockholder's money is the lifeblood of American business.

The concept of a stockholder is that he is a rich cuss who does nothing but cut coupons and cash dividend checks. In fact, there are fifteen million stockholders or about one out of twelve Americans own stocks. It is about the only way a man of small income can share in the business of the nation.

If they should be overtaxed until they spent their money for whiskey or recreation or buildings, American business would stop growing and the only source of investment funds would be the government. And that would be a socialistic mess for sure.

AVARICE

If the action of the 1961 legislature about highways becomes a policy the sparsely settled portions of the state may never have any new highways except such as are accidently built to serve the purposes of the thickly populated parts of the state. We think it entirely possible unless a constitutional amendment is passed to correct it.

We are referring to the two bond issues, one for $24,000,000 and one for $4,000,000. The first was for the construction of an entirely uneconomic bridge across the Columbia at its mouth and the second was for improvement of a very difficult piece of road in Wasco county. Both are evidence of poor government; both are poor legislation.

Neither of the two counties can muster more than one sixtieth of the population of the state; neither is making growth faster than the state; neither is politically powerful from tradition nor from personnel. That such counties should have done the best they could to break down the well established division of state highway funds and put the placing of highway funds on a political basis is to make possible that future highway building will be done in centers of population or between them. This would mean that rural Oregon will get roads when urban Oregon wants to give them, not on an equitable distribution basis as at present.

It was a very important step in state government and a step backward from fair development of the state. Perpetrators of the politicians who are responsible should be remembered. They were unworthy of the public trust.
