MAGAZINE STORY

Bob Cahn, a writer for the Saturday Evening Post, says Oregon is divided among those who want development and those who prefer fishing. Always was but industry keeps on coming in anyway.

The Willamette valley was settled by families who liked the country so well they wanted it all to themselves and that part of the state has often been somewhat reluctant to help industry come to Oregon. Yet, that is the part of the state where most of the industries have gone.

Eastern Oregon has the power and some pretty good timber to say nothing about the vast ranges and extensive wheat lands. It also has an advantage in climate and in places there is excellent transportation facilities. Such places will undoubtedly grow.

This newspaper has been trying to find out the attitude of Sherman countians about industry and think that a majority would just as soon the factories would pass them by, although they would do nothing either for or against new industry.

We do not think it is important, some one will be found to sell out to industry and someone will be glad to work for industry. Here, where we have electric power, water, transportation, land and climate we can not expect to remain a rural area much longer.

FALL

We used to know a man who liked fall work on a wheat ranch. He liked to haul wheat, make the long, tall stacks of straw forkful by forkful, liked to bring in the vegetables from the garden, and drive the stock into their winter quarters. Such preparation for the winter gave him delight.

However, to most humans, fall is not a pleasant time of year. Things die, the leaves fall from the trees, the fields are yellow and lifeless, the calves have grown to a much less interesting age and then it is cold to a body grown used to summer sun and not yet inured to heavy clothes and autumn winds.

But whether we like it or not it happens every year and usually right on time, not only by the calendar but by the temperature. The crops that grew so bountifully or so discouragingly are gone to be succeeded, after a winter of hope, by others that may or may not be better. The growing season is over except for that hardy stuff, wheat, which grows in cold weather.

There are pleasures of fall, like the fall games, some early skating, hunting but perhaps the best is cracking nuts in front of the fire and toasting the shins but it is really a time for withdrawing from the outdoors and getting used to living within walls.

Every fall we think about that man and his enjoyment of a season usually considered unhappy and go on to think how much happier all of us would be if we welcomed each season when it came instead of complaining about the end of the season just ending. Maybe we enjoy annoying ourselves.

FREEDOM

It was good of President Kennedy to say that this nation would fight to preserve freedom. We presume he meant freedom as a political concept. The idea of freedom has an odd history in that it often has more adherents when people are poor and oppressed than when they are prosperous. The fat and lazy are always willing to trade freedom for ease. So when a nation becomes rich it is less willing to fight for freedom than when poor and especially if it can lay its poorness to others. Mr. Kennedy was not elected by those who cherish freedom above all things, but by those who prefer ease, governmentally provided. Free food is a concept more attractive than freedom in these parts. Some races of people have been more active in fighting for freedom and independence than others, the Magyars whose descendants live in Hungary and Finland, the Basques of Spain and the Welsh, among them. Italians and Irish have fought for freedom and, of course, the colonists on these shores fought for theirs.

It may be that the world's population is too large to permit much freedom anymore and certainly the efforts of new and small nations to obtain freedom are causing a lot of trouble. Freedom always had to be restrained to be effective for a nation. It is valuable to retain because it recognizes the individual as of most importance, not the state. The conflict between the two ideologies of Russia which believes the government is superior to the individual, which theoretically believes in the superiority of the people to the state, goes on. It is good to have the president defend freedom and it would be good to have less pressure to exalt and increase the size of the state. In these days governments are the enemies of freedom.

CHANGE NEEDED

There are at least two spots on this globe where conditions must be changed before there is an opportunity for the world to settle down.

One is China. For political reasons we backed Chiang Kai Shek, not well enough that he could win, but enough to become attached to him. So now we support him in Formosa. The Reds took over the mainland of China and have apparently been doing a miserable job for Chinamen are starving. Formosa is sitting in the United Nations which may not mean much, but it does exclude millions of people from a voice in the only talking place in the world.

The other is Berlin. The men who isolated Berlin a full hundred miles in Russian territory and expected it to remain a neutral city or one long divided were among the world's craziest. Now this nation has gotten itself in a position where it must defend Berlin to save face. It probably will but as long as Berlin is in Soviet territory it cannot help but be dependent on the communists in time. The damage was done nearly twenty years ago and so far no one has proposed a way out.

The committee appointed to write a new constitution for Oregon or amend the old has decided to write it all over. That decision is an evidence of the god complex that affects so many officials. We doubt if any group can write a constitution the people will adopt. Oregonians, since the "reform" era at the turn of the century have cherished their right to change their constitution at will and have done so. That is largely what is wrong with it. Any new constitution that abrogated that right would not be adopted and any new constitution that didn't curtail the privilege of changing the constitution willy-nilly will be a small improvement. From the make up of the committee we prophesy it will continue the nefarious scheme of some young "liberals" to apportion representatives and senators on a population basis for both houses. Constitution makers back in 1780 knew better than that. We would expect the committee to permit the legislature to put an emergency clause on tax bills and we would expect the people to turn this down. It is likely that the committee will try to consolidate some of the dozens of agencies the state is burdened with and friends of them and also friends of friends of them will vote against it. The trend of the times has been for more government, bigger government, more extensive budgets with freer right to spend. If that trend still continues it is a poor time to write a constitution. The committee will have an interesting year, some of them will learn a good deal about government but nothing will come of it all.

Legislators are meeting in Bend Saturday to talk about what eastern Oregon should do to obtain a legislative apportionment that will make it possible for this section of the state to exist. That may be thought an extreme statement but anyone who knows the lack of knowledge about eastern Oregon across the mountains will not think so. First consideration must be given to getting all eastern Oregon to stand together. Any division will be fatal to its chances. The federal plan is the best solution and could probably be passed easier than some compromise.

Rufus News

by Mrs. George Fox
The Rufus Grange held its first pot luck dinner Thursday, Oct. 5. There were quite a few out to eat together with Mr. and Mrs. Roland Johnson and Mrs. Harland McDonald acting as hostesses.

Mrs. Roland Johnson, master opened the meeting which started at 8 p. m. Roland Johnson reported the ranches may get hunting by permission sign free by writing for them. He also read an article in the Oregon Farmer that said there will be no more watered pork after Dec. 1, 1961. He explained the hidden taxes we pay when buying food, etc. He told how to cut plastic tile without trouble. Mrs. Harland McDonald on legislation told of the bad effects of a sales tax, and also told of a new tax court in Oregon. She read an article on farm production and prices and the Grange opinion of them. Mrs. Otto Petersen told of the fire hazards during hunting season.

On the Home Ec Club it was reported no place for a rummage sale had been found as yet. The next club meeting Oct. 12 will be at the home of Mrs. Joe Morris. Mrs. Harland McDonald reported the Grange has a tidy sum left from the food booth at the Sherman County Fair. Miss Mary Brackett reports the Grange owes thanks to Bill Hall and the Sunshine Biscuit Co. for material used in the fair booth that placed second.

George Fox told of the opening of bids for the addition to the local grade school.

The Grange plans on having a Booster night Oct. 28. They voted to enter the Community Service contest for 1962. It was reported that Mrs. Millard Leigh was sick. Floyd Haines was ill and George Drinkard was injured in a fall.

For the literary program all participated in the action song "Three Blind Mice." The lecturer read a quiz on what and when we should eat. There was a game by two chosen groups. "A Proclamation on United Nations written by Dwight D. Eisenhower and read by Miss Mary Brackett. The group played a game to end the program after which Mrs. Roland Johnson read an article on hunting guests.

Under the good of the order Art Smith said markers or guard rails should be at the turn in the road south of Rufus near the Millard Leigh place. It was brought out the school buses could easily slip over the grade at this point if the road were snowy or icy. Now the Biggs Canyon is closed the high school bus and the grade school bus both use the Rufus grade road. Roland Johnson said all should stand at attention when the United States flag is on the floor. The master told of attending the state Grange building dedication in Portland.

Quite a few from Rufus area were called to report for jury duty Monday at the court house. Those serving on the Monday case from Rufus were Mrs. Merle Redding, Ms. John Belloni and Leland Medler. The others on the jury list were told to report Tuesday afternoon for another case.

Mr. and Mrs. George Fox went to spend Sunday at Mayville with a nephew and family Mr. and Mrs. James Greiner. On the way home over Cottonwood grade they saw where a deer had been hit that evening and lay alongside the highway. They also saw a doe crossing the highway ahead of their car.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Baum held a square dance for the children from the fourth grade through the eighth grade Friday night. They reported a lot of children were out for this first party. Chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. James W. Fox and Mr. and Mrs. Otto Petersen.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Baum also hosted a square dance for the high school and adults at Rufus Saturday night. There were quite a few out for this first party including some from Moro, Grass Valley and Kent. Mr. Baum plans having these parties every two weeks during the winter. It is a lot of fun the way Mr. Baum teaches the dances, everyone brings something for refreshments and each couple puts fifty cents in the kitty. It is open to the public, so everyone interested is welcome to come join in.

Mr. and Mrs. Norvel Williams of Oregon City stopped in Rufus Monday on their way home from eastern Oregon hunting fields, having two deer with them. Williams is a brother of Mrs. Geo. Fox.

COUNTY LOW ON IRRIGATED LAND

Sherman County ranks next to last in acres of irrigated land within the county. Only Clatsop County has fewer irrigated acres than Sherman County. The 1959 census gives us the most recent figures of irrigated land in the county. Since 1949 Sherman Counties irrigated acres have increased five times but at that our acreage is only 1500 acres. In 1949 we had 300 acres and in 1954, 600 acres. Of these acres 75 were sprinkler irrigated, in 1949 and 838 in 1959. Sherman Counties irrigated acreage has increased by 900 acres since 1954. The total land irrigated in Oregon was about 106 thousand acres less in 1959 than in 1954. This figure does not show the true picture and does not necessarily mean that irrigated acres in Oregon has dropped. Some counties with reduced irrigated acreages figures have considerable area of wild meadow pasture lands which were irrigated by run off water in the year of the census. Sprinkler irrigation acreage in Oregon increased 200 percent from 1949 to 1959.
