Rufus News

Just as a break in the old routine, your correspondent and her husband decided to see what the mountain country looked like this time of year. Turning off at Hood River we traveled through the valley to take the Mt. Hood Loop road. We saw strawberries in the fields ready for the harvesters.

The underbrush along the highway which grows so rank makes a very pretty sight at this time of year. We saw many travelers along the highway, some picnicking in the parks or roadside and fishermen trying their luck in the frolicking streams, which looked as if they could make one lose his footing for the reckless angler. The streams didn't appear deep, but the rough white current due to the rapid drop on the mountain road made a pretty picture.

Then a little farther along when it seemed we were such a short distance from Mt. Hood herself, her wintery blanket cut into to make it possible to travel this route. The snow was higher than the car along the road in some places.

Down at Government Camp we ran out of snow. We visited the Everett Darr place there. Darr has the lower ski lift which isn't used this time of year now that the snow is gone. Darr has built a lovely two split level home amidst the towering trees. He has an outside barbecue, a private lake for his trout fishing, and the last couple of years has added a swimming pool. The Darrs' two sons are proficient skiers and have many trophies set on their mantle.

Then on up to Timberline lodge where there is still plenty of snow for skiing. The snow is melting, but the hill is a blanket of white traveling to the lodge. We saw ski parties coming down from the climb up the hill. Their faces told tales of sun burn with the sun bouncing off the white slopes. The Multipoor ski left every hour, for three dollars you could ride to a high point overlooking the lodge and mountain range.

About every state in the Union was represented with the parked cars around the lodge of which there seemed hundreds. Some of the children were having the time of their lives playing in the snow. The ski lifts at Timberline were operating up the mountain.

We came home via Maupin and it was with regret that we bid the tall trees goodbye as we entered that lovely green valley. The growing wheat seemed farther along over there than it does in this county, and it seems like they use a different variety. The farmers should have a good crop this year from all appearances. The cattle on the flats looked like they were doing good, too. It was a Father's day trip.

Mr. and Mrs. James Fox arrived home Sunday after more than a week's trip over to the Puget Sound area. Saturday June 9 they attended a wedding of James' fraternity brother from WSU. Then on to Seattle for three days of the Fair where they were houseguests of Sue's sister and brother in law Mr. and Mrs. Ala Brandel. They visited at Bremerton with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Taga Ahlquist. After a Danish smorgasbord at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Brandel on Sunday they came home.

The REA in Rufus was off for three hours Saturday.

Miss Patsy Roberts was honored at a pretty bridal shower Saturday afternoon on the lawn at the Bob Byrd home. Other hostesses were Mrs. Bill Myers and Miss Jacel Hahn, a classmate of Patsy. After several games the guest opened her many lovely gifts. She was assisted by a classmate and Jacel. Then two other classmates, Miss Arlene Macnab serving punch and Miss Mary Haven serving coffee, helped with the refreshments. The lovely decorated bridal cake with two hearts entwined made by Mrs. Spencer complete with miniature umbrellas was served by Mrs. Hahn. Patsy's wedding date is set for July 5.

The benefit dance held to make money for the Little League's expenses was held at Rufus school Saturday night. Although the dance wasn't too large a crowd, the presence of tickets will help. The little league players are quite enthusiastic about their games and club.

The Rufus Home Ec members met at the Grange hall last Thursday to sort rummage, mend it and wash it, to make ready for the sale in The Dalles June 25. The sale will be all week from 10 until 6 daylight time. At noon Mrs. Joe Morris and Mrs. Otto Petersen served salad, jello, rolls and coffee.

After lunch Mrs. Petersen called a business meeting. The women decided what days each would help at the rummage sale. Ruth Leigh won the drawing. The next meeting will be July 12 with a no-host picnic at the Trace Fields home. All are reminded to bring their own silver and dishes.

The mercury climbed to 85 Monday and it looked like it might get hot one of these days. Last year the air conditioners were going for a long time by this date.

Mr. and Mrs. James Fox are up for a few days from their place at Corbett, to see about their holdings along the John Day. Sun

A one-day field trip for high school boys enrolled in the Junior Engineers' and Scientists' Summer Institute now in progress at Oregon State University brought nearly 200 youngsters to Portland as guests of Pacific Power & Light Company. They toured PP

& L's research, engineering and electronic computer facilities and heard a dozen PP&L specialists describe their jobs and educational backgrounds in a career seminar. In the PP&L design section, three of the visitors inspect a model of a power transmission

day Mr. and Mrs. Ig Wand and family visited them at their John Day river home, and left two of their sons to stay with the Foxes for a visit. Ig Wand is a nephew of Mrs. Fox. The Wands just this year opened a dry cleaning establishment at Gresham.

Miss Karen Macnab who represented the Wasco American Legion Auxiliary at Girls' State returned home Sunday. The girls are quite enthusiastic about this program, learning about the government. Sunday guests of the Leonard Jordans were Mrs. Jordan's sister and brother in law, Mr. and Mrs. Trueman Smith of Portland.

Mrs. Joe Morris and daughter Lael and Lianne spent Father's day in Arlington with her husband at the filling station which he operates. Then they all went out to dinner together. While there they called on Mrs. Morris' son and daughter in law, Mr. and Mrs. Wally Morris.
