Dell and Ella Olds had themselves a ball last Sunday when relatives and friends gathered at the Odd Fellows hall in Grass Valley on their fiftieth wedding day. They came from Long Beach and San Francisco, from the Willamette valley, from The Dalles, from Heppner and from close to home. They did the usual things done at golden wedding receptions, talk and talk and wish the central couple the very best for the future. Mr and Mrs Olds have lived in Grass Valley since they were

Work Easier, Not So Hard with Strawn

More leisure time for today's homemaker—that's what some people say. But many of the women we know don't agree. "What leisure?" asked a mother of two lively pre-schoolers. True, there is less manual labor for homemakers today, but time is still pressing for young mothers and women who work out side the home. There's much more to know now, more to decide, more to manage, if you're going to keep a smooth-running home. And what about all the community organizations! They take time too.

Being an up-to-date consumer is no small matter when you face the fact that half the products on the grocery shelf weren't there a few years ago.

TAKE DETERGENTS, for instance. You'll find from 50 to 100 different brands and package sizes on the market shelves. One of the newest is the detergent tablet, sometimes lightly called "elephant aspirin." What about the price, we are asked. And do they get clothes clean?

First, the cost. Ounce for ounce, these ready-measured products will cost you a few pennies more than the granular product. But since some women waste detergent by not measuring, they may end up at about the same price per wash load in the long run. There are also home makers who use too little granular detergent and are disappointed in their results. A pre-measured product will help get the right amount and better results. As for getting clothes clean, the tablets do the job, but as always, be sure to read the directions on the package. What this all amounts to is—if you want to save money measure your own.

If you would like to know more about all these new products, write me at Oregon State University, Corvallis, and ask for the new bulletin "Today's Soaps and Detergents." It's free.

AT THIS TIME OF YEAR we get calls about window cleaning after a season of lawn spraying. Water spots due to minerals seem to have "squatter's rights".

There is no one answer, because it all depends on which minerals are in your water. Sometimes the glass is actually etched and the only solution is to replace it. Perhaps one of these ideas will work for you.

First, we'll assume you've already tried the standby remedies—ammonia, vinegar, or commercial window cleaners. Next, try powdered window softener or conditioner—the kind that does not form a scum. Don't use any other cleaner with it. If this fails, sprinkle a little rust remover powder on a wet cloth and apply a little elbow grease. You'll find several brands of rust removers in shaker cans in supermarkets. Some people have successfully cleaned these mineral deposits with kerosene and water. Happy experimenting!

TO CLEAN NARROW NECK VASES which can't be washed with a dishcloth or bottle brush, give this idea a whirl. Put a few grains of raw rice in the vase and warm suds and shake well. The friction will loosen the soil. Do this twice. Empty and rinse. Finally, "sweeten" it with a little baking soda in the rinse water.

A recent African visitor to the OSU campus said that one of the big problems in his underdeveloped country was that "the women didn't want anything." What music that would be to some American husband's ears! But think what this means. Without demand for things to be manufactured and sold, there aren't many jobs people are hungry, and living is largely a matter of merely existing. You home makers pack a wallop here in our land. Your wants dominate every consumer product made in America. If enough of you turn thumbs down on an item, they stop making it. You, the consumer, make this country tick. Turn this over in your mind while you're working at the stack of ironing, or any time you need a boost.

Way to Make Good Whipped Bread

Homemakers can now make fluffy homemade yeast bread and rolls higher and lighter than traditional recipes allow with directions provided by OSU economists.

Similar to batter whip breads now on the market, fluffy bread can be made from favorite recipes mainly with a change in the method of mixing, says Dr. Andrea Mackey.

To make air-whipped bread, add all the liquid and about one-third the amount of flour called for in the bread recipe. Mix in a mixer or by hand until thoroughly blended. This first mixing develops the gluten—those long strands its distinctive character. It also whips air into the mixture.

After mixture is well blended, add remainder of the flour, salt, sugar, yeast and shortening. And beat well again.

Busy home makers who may not have time to make favorite yeast breads in one operation can mix the dough one day, refrigerate it and let it rise and bake the next day with no loss in quality in the final product, the home economist points out.

Economists found out in basic studies on dough and bread quality that regardless of the temperature at which dough started to rise the final product came out the same although cold doughs took longer to rise.

Farm Bureau Reports

The governor's budget released two weeks ago is getting a long look by many groups across the state. Within the covers of the lengthy report one quickly gathers the feeling that our governor is cognizant of the ever-increasing tax load.

He has suggested several ways of gaining more revenue without tacking more on property tax payers who are now carrying the brunt of education costs.

The budget calls for a net receipts tax, a cigarette tax and upping of the tax tab on liquor to help fill the state's coffers.

Farm Bureau folks have contended new tax formulas should be initiated to relieve property tax payers from their role of San Claus to the financing of education in the state. At the Farm Bureau convention in November, the members voted to call for increasing the basic school support fund up to 70 per cent of the operating cost. Since basic school support money comes from the general fund whose principal source is income taxes, this was obviously an attempt to relieve property taxes.

To supply the additional revenue needed to increase the basic school support fund, they suggested a sales tax, cigarette tax, liquor tax, net receipts tax and a gross income tax, or a combination thereof, as a way of accomplishing that aim. The governor also suggested a portion of these new methods of taxation.

The legislature has its work cut out for itself in attempting to raise more money without putting a disproportionate share on those who are already carrying the brunt of the load. It will be a difficult session.

Squirrels Not Good Weather Prophets

When squirrels gather and store seeds and nuts earlier than usual, it doesn't necessarily mean a "hard winter".

Dr. Robert M. Storm, Oregon State University zoology professor, reports there is no scientific basis for saying early nut collecting by squirrels means a severe winter.

Squirrels hide their winter food in many caches and sense them out when needed. Research by Olex.

Rufus News

By Mrs. George Fox

Well, Christmas has come and gone for 1962, and it was an outstanding year as far as nice weather went. Today, it is warm sun shine and it doesn't look like it is the first of the year. Instead it looks like March and that goes for the green fields of wheat and the lush pasture lands which are like velvet.

There's more and more construction work going on in and around Rufus and up to Arlington. The schools are filled with the worker's children, the trailer courts are filled with one adding a few spaces to fill when they are finished.

The Rufus Grange held a party as a Christmas program for members and their families. The evening began with all enjoying a pot luck dinner. Then an old fashioned program followed to make it a family program. To begin with all sang Jingle Bells with Mrs Jerry Brackett at the piano. Next was a song by Lael and Lianne Morris and Janice Byrd, "Cradle Hymn" accompanied by Mrs Joe Morris on the piano. Rolinda Gray gave a recitation then sang a song accompanied on the piano by her sister Cheryl Gray. After that Cheryl played a piano solo. Mrs Trace Frieus recited a poem spoken by her mother when she was in her first Christmas program which was many years ago. Mrs Millard Leigh told of an early Christmas at her home when she was a youngster, Mrs Harland McDonald and Mrs Roland Johnson gave readings. Mrs Bert Swigert told of an old fashioned Christmas in her Scandinavian family when she was a girl living in Montana. Mrs Bill Huck told of an early Christmas in her family. Then all sang Christmas carols until Santa Claus appeared with gifts and candy for all the children and adults.

Mr and Mrs James Fox and son Andy spent a week visiting in Bremerton, Wash., with Sue's parents, Mr and Mrs Tage Ahlquist during the holidays.

Dr and Mrs Wilson Foote and children, Nancy and Robert came Friday to spend until Monday at her parents', George Fox's home.

On Saturday the Footes all went to the Earl Weatherford home at Olex.
