

Accepting the Richfield Conservation Award on behalf of the Wasco Womens Study Club was Mrs. H. M. Zell, past president. Presenting the engraved golden bowl at the annual convention of the Oregon Federation of Womens Clubs was K. W. Newerf, Richfield Oil Corp; Newerf, who came from Los Angeles to make the presentation, appeared before more than 400 women who convened at Eugene.

Wasco Study Club Gets Second Place

The Wasco Womens Study Club held its regular meeting at the Wasco Methodist church Monday. A potluck luncheon was served by the hostesses, Grace Medler, Madge Shull and Margaret Smith. The business meeting was presided over by the president Mrs. Martin Pshigoda. Mrs. Frank Reid reported on the state convention in Eugene last week. Five members of the local club attended the convention. Mrs. Reid was pleased to present the club with a silver bowl won by the club for its work in conservation. The trophy was the second place award from the Richfield Oil company and was presented at the banquet in Eugene.

Mrs. Walt Bruckert was introduced as installing officer and installed the following officers: Mrs. Frank Reid, president; Mrs. Vernon Root, secretary; and Mr. Gordon Harper, treasurer.

Mr. Richard Lacey of the P. P. & L., The Dalles, showed a film on "Mouth to Mouth Resuscitation" as part of the program. This was the last meeting before the summer recess. Regular meetings will begin in September.

Deschutes River

ial for various types of outdoor recreation, including fishing, hunting, camping, picnicking, sightseeing, hiking, and associated activities. However, at the present time, most of this public land is inaccessible to the public because of private closures and physical barriers."

Getty told the legislators that the portion of the river below Sherars Bridge was selected for initial development because it is the biggest single block of public lands, it can be made readily accessible from a State highway and Sherman County is presently qualified for Accelerated Public Works funds. Congress is currently considering the final appropriation under the Accelerated Public Works Act.

He also pointed out that that section of the Deschutes is only about a two and a half to three hour drive from Oregon's major population center — Portland and the upper Willamette Valley. Getty reported the findings of the Deschutes study group as follows:

Development of the recreation potential of the Sherars Bridge to Mack Canyon segment of the river would be an important and significant step in helping to meet statewide recreation needs.

It is estimated that recreation use of the area would increase from a present annual use of about 3,000 to approximately 75,000 annually if access and recommended developments are provided.

A two-lane, surfaced road which would dead end at Mack Canyon should be constructed initially.

Three recreation sites should be developed initially. They would include camping and day-use facilities as well as provisions for boat launching and parking.

Range improvements would be designed so as to shift the present pattern of grazing use away from the river to the higher range areas in order to avoid conflicts with recreation use of the river.

Improvements and facilities would be designed so as to reduce the danger of fire.

Estimated cost of the initial developments is $565,000. Financing of the Deschutes project could come from Federal or a combination of State and Federal funds, said Getty. Work could begin as soon as funds were available.

The State Legislative Interim Committee on Natural Resources is presently considering a joint memorial urging the U. S. Congress to appropriate funds for construction of access roads along the lower Deschutes.

Final Referendum Committee Meeting

Meeting in Portland, the Wheat Referendum Committee for a "Yes" Vote reviewed on Tuesday its statewide effort to encourage passage of the Government's proposed wheat program on May 21. The committee, chaired by Paulep Kaseberg of Wasco and composed of prominent wheat growers and farm association representatives, heard reports on producer meetings in various sections of the state and mapped out strategy for the final two weeks of the campaign.

"All indications point to a heavy turnout by wheat growers on May 21st," said Chairman Kaseberg. "While we're not inclined to be overly optimistic, we do feel that the overwhelming advantages of supporting the 1964 Wheat Program are becoming generally recognized."

The vote-yes committee, which is backed by the Oregon Wheat Growers League and other organizations, debunked opposition charges that defeat of the measure will result in fewer federal controls and will open the door for alternative legislation.

"These arguments are fallacious and self-contradictory," asserted Kaseberg. "On the one hand they express a distaste for government involvement in agriculture, and on the other they anticipate new federal legislation to bail out the industry. We are convinced that the referendum measure provides the fairest solution for the farmer, the taxpayer and the national economy with a minimum of controls."

Committee members observed that local businessmen and bankers in farming communities have privately endorsed the vote-yes stand and its price-support features.

"Most of the business community remembers the depression years and the chaotic efforts on our economy when grain prices sank out of sight," declared Kaseberg. "Today they agree with us that maintenance of a reasonable level of wheat prices and production protects everybody from the disastrous consequences of unlimited production and increased stockpiling."

Big Things at Rufus

As Oregonians know, Rufus is the site of the over $400 million John Day Dam which is under construction, and about half completed. The powerhouse bids will be let this summer. The town of Arlington and Boardman will be re-located. Railroads and highways between these points are being re-located.

The workers have filled all the houses and have brought more than 400 trailer homes to this area which formerly had less than 100 population. The Rufus School added two new classrooms last year, has eight teachers, and over 180 students at the elementary school of which Roy Gayman is principal.

Rufus Grange met in regular session last Thursday evening with the master Mrs. Rolland Johnson presiding. Rolland Johnson reported on agriculture and told of the bills in the legislature the packaging of fruits and other commodities. Martin Zimmerman told of rust in the wheat due to the cold damp weather. Mrs. Harland McDonald on legislation said this is the longest time in any legislative session. Geo. Fox told of a bill on the transportation of students. He reminded all of the annual school election is May 6 at the school houses. Mrs. Millard Leigh Home Economics chairman said the women will have a work day on May 9 and for all to bring a sack lunch. Bill Buck on insurance said he has some new rates which are higher than before. Joe Morrow on Safety told of the danger of handling the weed sprays.

It was pointed out that two of the Grange members Mrs. Pearl Brackett and Mrs. Tracy Fields are in the hospital.

For the lecturers program which was on Mother's Day theme, Mrs. Geo Fox read the origin of Mothers Day. Jimmy Fox gave "When Ma Cleans The House". A question and answer game by the group, "Mothers Almanac" is read by Mrs. Rolland Johnson and Mary Brackett read a "Tribute to Mother".

The Sherman County Pomona Grange will meet at Harlandview on Saturday, May 11 with a noon pot luck dinner.

After raining most of last week it is still cloudy out this week and a few showers also.

Dr. Wilson Foote and three other men on the staff at Oregon State College stopped briefly in Rufus Tuesday at the Geo. Fox home. The men were going to a meeting in Pendleton. They are concerned about our wheat situation.

Clarence Higley announces the engagement of his daughter Miss Kay (Kathleen Ina) to David Howard Conlee of Moro. No date has been set. The bride-to-be plans to attend college this fall.
