State Health Board Alerts Oregonians To Sun Stroke

The Oregon State Board of Health today cautioned Oregonians to be alert to the possibilities of sun-stroke or heat prostration from over-exertion. With the advent of hot sunny days, many people will be adversely affected by both conditions, Dr. Richard H. Wilcox, State Health Officer, indicated.

Although the two conditions frequently are thought to be the same, they require different methods of handling. Symptoms of sun-stroke include a very red face, hot dry skin, no perspiration, labored breathing or sighing a full and rapid pulse, high temperature and possible muscle spasms. Heat exhaustion, on the other hand, usually produces muscular weakness, dizziness, nausea, an uncertain or staggering gait, pale face, profuse perspiration, weak pulse, shallow breathing, and the victim may become cold even though the air is warmer than body heat, Dr. Wilcox explained.

Sun-stroke victims should be moved to a cool place immediately and a physician should be called. The patient's clothing should be loosened, the body cooled, and brisk rubbing should be started to stimulate circulation. Avoid ice packs or baths because they constrict surface blood vessels.

In the case of heat exhaustion, the patient should lie down in an area with good air circulation and be given a moderate amount of covering. A level half-teaspoonful of salt in about one-third glass of water may be given repeatedly until as much as a level tablespoon of salt has been taken. Stimulants such as warm coffee or tea may be given and external heat may be needed in severe cases. A physician should always be consulted, Dr. Wilcox emphasized.

Sun-stroke and heat exhaustion can strike anyone, although serious cases occur most often among alcoholics, young children, elderly people, overweight persons, and those suffering from some chronic illness, the doctor concluded.
