Oregon State Game Commission— Bighorn Sheep Have Good Crop; Hunters Should Check Permits; Fish Permits Due

Last Chance
This week is the last chance for salmon-steelhead anglers to turn in their 1962 punch card. Mail it to the game commission in Portland or put it in the box at your local license agency.

The information on this card is valuable! The deadline is July 1. Bighorn Sheep Have Good Crop
Almost one lamb to each bighorn ewe is the report from this year's bighorn sheep counters according to the Oregon Game Commission.

Dave Luman, chief big game biologist for the commission, and four other commission personnel made the annual count on June 20. After traversing the 1,000-acre pen on Hart mountain and the adjacent rimrocks, the hikers tallied a total of 53 sheep. Inside the pen were 12 adults and 7 lambs, while outside were 4 adult rams, 16 ewes and 14 lambs.

"Excellent" was Luman's appraisal of the lamb crops, pointing out that the 21 lambs for 28 ewes was almost more than could be expected. The counting crew also found one dead lamb that had died from an internal birth defect.

Since the reintroduction of 20 tishbighorns into Oregon from British Columbia in November of 1954, the herd has steadily increased. Last year 48 animals were observed on the Hart mountain count, and at least 11 animals have been seen in the Steens mountains where releases were made from the Hart mountain herd in 1960 and 1961.

Though the tally this year revealed 53 animals, Luman said that the lack of rams in the count and the difficulties of complete observation in the area make the possibility of animals left uncounted quite high. Tentative plans are now under way to trap some of the animals and move them to the Steens mountains to strengthen the herd that has been started there. No complete tally has been made of the Steens herd, but such a count may be attempted later this year.

Hunters Check Unit Permits
If you're a deer hunter, the game commission reminds that you should check carefully how you want to use your unit permit application this year.

According to the regulations for 1963, no hunter will be permitted to take more than one deer during this year's seasons. This makes a choice necessary.

There are no controlled hunts scheduled for this fall; however, there are a number of extended seasons. Three of these extended seasons are early deer seasons and here's where the use of the unit permit comes into play.

If a hunter wants to participate in the High Cascade buck season, the Waldport - Mapleton buck deer season or the Minam Pack area season, he must use his unit permit application, received with his deer tag, to apply. In the case of the High Cascade and Waldport - Mapleton hunts, the hunter will be able to use his permit only during these seasons. In the Minam hunt, the permit will be good for the early hunt and then the regular antlerless season in the Minam unit during the regular season.

During the post season hunts the regular unit permit is all that is needed, or in the case of the Northwest Agricultural area hunt just a hunting license and general deer tag.

The commission emphasizes that hunters wishing to participate in the early hunts should consider the rules carefully before applying since this is the only use they will get out of their unit permit application. Conversely, if the permit application is used to apply for a regular unit permit, the hunter will not be able to apply for either the early High Cascade buck season or the Waldport - Mapleton hunt. Details of these hunts will be

Oregon Crop Weather Summary

Grain Harvest Underway
Oregon's 1963 grain harvest got underway during the report week as combines began to work winter barley in the Pilot Rock area of Umatilla county. Processing pea harvest had well passed the halfway mark. Rainfall, accompanied by cooler temperatures, has allowed uniform development providing excellent yield and quality. Winter wheat prospects improved with the very favorable weather. Foot rot, leaf stripe rust and heavy infestations of cheatgrass still are causing considerable concern in parts of the Columbia Basin wheat area. Spring grain expectations, particularly in the late seeded areas of the Willamette Valley, have improved considerably with the additional rainfall. Yellow virus, however, is becoming more evident in the barley plantings. Rain damage occurred in late grass hay cuttings in the Willamette Valley, while local damage was reported to alfalfa cuttings in the eastern portion of the State. Second cuttings of alfalfa are ready in early areas. Crimson clover seed harvest has been delayed with most of the crop in the swath. Continued rainfall could cause considerable damage. Swathing of bluegrass seed is underway in western and eastern areas.

Western Oregon fruit crops generally deteriorated following the showers and cool temperatures. Strawberry harvest is more than half through. Rot and mold are appearing, particularly in untreated fields. Berries are running quite small. The first red raspberries and loganberries were taken at the end of the week. Cherry harvest was beginning in the Willamette Valley with considerable crack damage reported. Harvest at The Dalles is well underway with good crop prospects.

Central and southern Oregon potato crops continue to make good progress with no frost damage reported to date. Plant growth is up to 8 inches in some fields. The late summer potato area also reports unusually good growing weather and crop prospects.

Sugar beets, melons, and field corn were making normal gains. Pastures and ranges continue to offer unusually good grazing. Cool temperatures and additional rainfall have prolonged the hill land pastures in the Willamette Valley. High ranges in the east reflect the unusually heavy late spring rains. Cattle and sheep are making excellent gains.

Gilliam: Foot rot causing considerable damage in fall grains, however, yields are expected to be about normal on most farms. Hood River: Strawberry harvest in full swing, labor is in short supply. Cold weather slowing ripening of berries.
