More gold, and more certain mines, have been unearthed in Baker county Oregon, since the stampede set in to Klondyke, than will be developed in Alaska for years to come. But it seems to be human to chase rainbows.

Twice, recently Astoria papers have asserted that "the Chinook salmon is known not to take a hook in these waters." This is false. Chinook salmon do take the hook "in these waters" as readily as carp do filth.

The tobacco manufacturing establishments of the United States are doing more to check the use of the filthy weed than all else by producing such miserably mean stuff that nobody ever any longer gets a decent chew or smoke of any variety.

Sherman county has the best horses on the Pacific coast. THE OBSERVER is proud of the fact. Measly and mangy horses east and west of this county have been authorized by the state domestic animal commission to at once be quarantined and if necessary destroyed, according to the laws provided for preventing the spread of contagious diseases among domestic animals, and for this order we are duly thankful.

Bro. Stewart of the Fossil Journal traveled 120 miles by stage and 170 miles by rail to hear Bryan in Pendleton a month ago. After giving a concise and very truthful report of the balderdash harrangued by the "orator" the venal press sent Stewart and the Journal to hades stern first. But Stewart had "the last say" in which he very nicely pilloried the foists of The Oregonian. Intelligent readers in Oregon can no longer be duped by a designing press as the history of this Bryan-Fossil episode clearly demonstrates.

THE OBSERVER influence is wide spread. Through advertising in these columns The Imperial hotel was so filled up July 15th with Ohio Christian Endeavorers that Tom didn't have a room left for THE O. MAN when he dropped in an hour later. This is a fact. Another circumstance--A deserving young artist in New York city was last June promoted to a responsible position because of criticisms in THE OBSERVER, calling to the attention of his employers the fact that his merit was overshadowed and overlooked incident to a craze for monstrosities of the cartoonist. Someday THE OBSERVER will be better appreciated at home than it is today, perhaps.

The supreme court decision defining the duties of the secretary of state in the matter of treating claims against the state is received with much satisfaction. Aside from the general saving that will inare to the state when the claims are audited there will be an individual saving by a large number of state creditors whose claims need no longer be subjected to discount. The long list of those who will be thus benefitted includes the employes of the state institutions and those who furnish supplies. While according to the decision it will become the duty of the secretary of state to audit claims and draw warrants the state treasurer is not required to pay warrants and it is generally understood the warrants will be cashed at their face value.

BEANS AT BIGELOW FARM.

The following from A.V. Underwood, giving farmers the result of a practical experiment, will be read with interest. Mr.U. says:

"Having on hand last spring seed of over 50 varieties of beans I determined to plant and keep track of each kind separately and thereby more fully ascertain what varieties one is safest in trying to grow on our dry wheat lands of Sherman.

"Thirty two varieties with me were a total failure, among which I mention the following familiar varieties: Oderline, hogolet wax, white marrowfat, speckled wax, scarlet flagolet, improved horticulturist, Emperor William, new string, prolific tree, Detroit wax, English horse bean, golden eyed wax, U.S. department, hulander, black eyed wax, refugee wax, German black wax, red valentine, dwarf flagolet, dwarf black wax, cranberry.

"The following are among those that seem to be worth growing though the yield is small: Kentucky wonder, ne plus ultra, red podded, early mowhawk, stringless and white craseback. Some twelve varieties, the names of which I do not know except the following, are a pronounced success: Winners favorite, red bean, purple flower, vine. Swaggart, red bean, white flower, bush; white navy and Jackson lima or speckled butter bean.

One of my best is a yellow vine bean which I call Cuyuse; another is a light pink vine or bush bean that I call John Day; still another favorite is a light brown bean that makes an immense growth during the summer and blooms and ripens a good crop of beans after the early fall rains. My best early white bean goes by the number "49." It is a fair sized slender bean with a yellow spot on either side of a white eye. They are nearly all ripe at this writing. My "No.62" is a large, flat, white, vine bean that is holding a good crop, some just ripening, and is still blooming.

"I trust this report will stimulate others who are growing beans to bring their best to the fair at Moro this fall, that we may compare notes to the benefit of bean growing in Sherman county."

Another rich find in The Waiting Empire has been stumbled upon. It is a lode near Sparta estimated to go at least $40,000 to the ton, but of course no one as yet knows how extensive it may be. There is a well settled conviction in the minds of all practical mining men that there is in the Sparta vicinity a rich feeder ledge to the placer deposits of that district which have yielded perhaps a million dollars in the last 20 years. Some day this mother lode will be uncovered and Sparta will become one of the prominent mining camps of the world.

Mr. Ellis arrived at his home in Heppner last week. The Oregon delegation are now all in Oregon enjoying a much needed rest.

FREAKS OF HUMAN NATURE.

Some of Them Which Physicians Have an Opportunity to See.

"We doctors have a much better opportunity than most people for studying human nature," said a Washington physician to a Washington Star reporter the other day. "Most patients do not consider it necessary to put on airs before their medical attendants. One thing that has often struck me is the disregard which young folks generally have for the old. I don't mean that they are not courteous to them, for courtesy to one's elders is a matter of ordinary education; but when it comes to really caring for them they are lacking as a rule.

"One is shocked to read of the manner in which savage tribes all over the world leave the old people to die neglected, even depriving them of shelter because they are no longer useful. Even in civilized countries the same thing is often done. Go to Savoy and you find that the aged and infirm are put out to beg on the public highways. It is commonly said that the love of the child for the parent is much less strong, even among the most enlightened peoples, than the affection of the parent for the child. There is a reason for this, which philosophers find in a natural law. The love of the parent for the child is necessary to the perpetuation of the race, for which nature makes provision beyond all things else; but, on the other hand, there is no such reason of necessity for care taking on the part of the child in behalf of the parent.

"So I am not surprised to find in my practice ever so many instances where old people are neglected by their children, who are apt to regard them as a burden, considering often that they would be very much better out of the world and way. Another thing even more remarkable that I notice is that conjugal affection is very apt not to survive long illnesses. If the wife is an invalid the husband ofttimes becomes indifferent to her after awhile. Or, if the husband is sickly, the wife finds it burdensome. In either case the well partner to the matrimonial bargain becomes, though unconsciously, resentful of the invalidism of the other, and in many cases seeks distractions outside of the home."

Planted by Franklin.

On the old Boston and New Haven turnpike in the southern part of New London county, Conn., is an old milestone, notched and moss-grown, that was set there by Benjamin Franklin. When the highway was laid out Franklin got the job of setting its milestones, and he did it in an original way. He set out from Boston in a comfortable chaise that he had built, and a gang of men followed him with a team that conveyed the stones. Franklin's vehicle had a peculiar machine that marked the miles according to the revolutions of the wheels. He drove all the way between Boston and the Elm city. This historic stone is alongside of the John Champion farm in Lyme.

AN ENORMOUS PROJECTILE.

One Weighing 2,6.0 Pounds Has Been Fired from a Krupp Cannon.

The size of the biggest ball ever fired from a cannon was four feet in length and weighed 2,600 pounds, says an English authority.

Such were the dimensions and weight of the enormous projectile fired from the largest cannon yet manufactured at Krupp's works, at Essen, for the fortification of Cronstadt.

It is made of the finest quality of cast-steel, and weighs 270,000 pounds (about 135 tons). The caliber is sixteen and one-quarter inches and the barrel forty-four feet long, the core having been removed in one piece.

The greatest diameter is six and one-half feet, and range about twelve miles. It will fire two shots per minute, each estimated to cost £300.

At the trial the projectile was propelled by a charge of 700 pounds of powder, and penetrated nineteen inches of armor, going 1,312 yards beyond the target.
