

The Observer

MORO, SHERMAN CO., OREGON:
FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1939

Entered as second class matter at the post office at Moro, for transmission through the United States mails.

New Organ and Piano for sale, part cash, at The Observer office, Moro.

Blank Books, Records, etc., the best manufactured in the United States, to order, at The Observer office. Sole agency for Bernard & Co.

The Observer invites correspondence from every precinct in Sherman county. It is not out of the ordinary to have a representative in these columns. Write for particulars, stationery and stamps.

The price of The Observer is $1.50 per year, 75 cents for six months, 50 cents for four months—but if paid in advance we accept $1.00 in full for one year. Shorter terms than one year 12 1/2 cents per month.

Is your subscription to The Observer up? If so kindly drop in and renew it. Only $1 in advance for the year and we will give you all the county news, and more general news of the day than any other county paper in Oregon.

Patrons will confer a favor when they will have the paper discontinued if they will address us direct. Do not ask your postmaster to effect mail to be discontinued. Write direct to us to remit the sum due us. All arrears must be paid.

CITY AND COUNTY.

Business for sale. See ad.

The Portland exposition opens September 23rd.

Mayor C.E. Jones and wife were in Moro visited on the 3d.

A.C. Sanford was a Portland visitor the first of the week.

J. Boone Wheat will be at home in Arlington after this week.

Studies in the schools of Moro will be resumed on the 18th.

Henry Schewitz, the Kent P.M., was in on business this week.

Grass Valley "has a pull" that will fetch to the C.S.R.

Miss Jennie Hulse is now principal of the Albany high school.

Stencils to order at The Observer office. Mark your wheat sacks.

J. Harvey Smith returned from a business trip to the Dalles the 5th.

Mr. and Mrs. C.E. Chapman have returned to their home in Minnesota.

A.H. Hembree threshed for Lambhear; Klondike for John Johnson.

Little Walter, one of Capt. Stanley's twin boys, has been on the sick list.

Thos. Callaghan and N.H. Goelgen hauled in their header outfit on the 2d.

A. Scott and A. Holder each gave two blocks of land for the depot in Grass Valley.

Sam McDonald drove in 22 head of splendid beef cattle, purchased from Mackin Bros.

E.W. Elrod has joined the business of his son in Moro and the firm is now J.O. Elrod & Co.

Robert Allison, who accompanied Col. Buckley's flock to Colorado and Chicago, is again at home.

A little son of T.J. Farra had his arm broken by falling backwards out of a back a few days ago.

Wanted. A good girl to work in a private family. Address, Mrs. A. S. Bennett, The Dalles, Oregon.

Miss Sadie Orr was in Moro on the 4th making a few social calls for the first time in about two years.

Miss Jennie Williams and niece are at home again after very pleasant visits in Goldendale, the Dalles and Hood River.

John Willis has 50 tons of hay on his Roseburg ranch which he is offering at $10 per ton. May be fed on the ranch.

J.W. Brown was in on the 4th securing a crew of men for the Finnigan neighborhood. He has the C.N. Gilman machine.

County Institute a full program, this evening. We don't know whether the public are invited or not—it appears to be under the auspices of the ring.

Whoever found a light cloth over coat, lost August 22d on the road between Wasco and my farm will confer a favor by letting me know where I can find it. Robt. Newton.

The mystery of life and death has puzzled many a scientist. The alchemists of old searched in vain for the secret of life. The modern chemists have not yet found it. The secret of life is in the blood. The blood is the life-giving fluid. The blood is the life-giving fluid. The blood is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

Common sense teaches that a man should not overwork or over-learn; that he should take ample time for his meals, for resting and for recreation and sleep; that he should not neglect the little bits of life, because they are the precursors of serious and fatal maladies. Chemistry has enabled men to make combinations of drugs that were impossible in the days of the alchemists. The first work is upon the fountain of life—the stomach. A man who has a weak stomach is a man who is doomed to a life of misery and suffering. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid. The stomach is the life-giving fluid.

C.H. Toms has sold his farm to G.W. Coy.

Miss Ethel Poole is home again from the Dalles.

Brick layers have yet much to do on the court house.

S.S. Hayes made a flying trip to the valley this week.

How about flax? Who intends to declare a dividend on flax this fall?

There is not a vacant house in Moro. There is need of more dwellings.

O.P. Hulse has taken an interest with N.W. Thompson in the Blue Barn.

Dufur is a model city. Moro might copy Dufur ordinances with profit.

Mrs. H. A. Moore and Master Harry will soon become residents of Portland.

A sample of peach butter made by Mrs. M.H. Poole was duly appreciated at this office.

Mr. and Mrs. D.M. Radley entertained a coaching party of several ladies at Harris on the 3d.

Mrs. Mattie Mitchell of Moro has been granted a life certificate to teach in Oregon public schools.

J.M. Filloun is agent for the sale of that most wonderful discovery in the science of medicine, the oxygene.

Elder Lot Rust is now at home and is gradually improving. He can sit up, but is confined to the house.

Doug Allen and wife are visiting in Grass Valley this week. Doug is about to start another stage line in and out of Moro.

A "tabernacle" near the park invites people to come and seek salvation. Moro has three churches, but no preacher.

Willard Vanderpool took a Weber wagon to DesChutes mill with him Wednesday. The mill will be ready to start work Monday.

Deputy Sheriff Brown had a narrow escape from drowning in the DesChutes with his team on the 3d, but happily saved all.

Monday was a busy day in Moro. The rains had knocked harvesting and advantage was taken of the event to do some shopping.

Many stalwart farmers were in town Monday. The weather was drizzling and wet but everybody appeared to be in good spirits.

A regular downpour of rain for over an hour by 4 a.m. stopped harvest work Sunday, and Sunday night was all wet, but work resumed Tuesday.

Mrs. T.R. McGinnis and daughter returned from Portland on the 4th. The health of the daughter is much improved, but she is yet far from being well.

A bowl of hot milk taken immediately before retiring is said by those who have suffered from insomnia to be a better soporific than any opiate known to medical science.

The hand of the forestry cranks is positively pointing the sheep to Go! At present rate of going in another three years there will be only an occasional sack of wool to attract one's attention.

H.V. Gates' water and light plant still lies in Moro on cars. There is about 16,000 lbs of it; and it is expected at Prineville to pump water and electricity for their city on or before Dec. 1st, A.D. 1899.

A holder of Grass Valley was in Moro on the 5th. Sheriff Holder returned from Portland the evening before expecting soon to be able to attend to business, but was obliged to return to Portland yesterday.

A workman named Kyle fell 11 feet from a scaffolding in the county court house building on the 5th. He fell under a barrow full of bricks and was considerably scared and shaken up. No bones were broken.

S.B. Adams says the reason why Wasco county hasn't improved the roads for the past 15 years is because the county poor house is on the main avenue and patients are hauled over it. If the patient survives the trip he is able to work.

While the 14 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Scott, at Grass Valley, was buried on the 4th. He had been a patient sufferer for years. The funeral was the largest ever held in Sherman county, evidencing the sympathy extended to the bereaved family.

Six men, tramps stealing rides, have been killed this year "rounding the curves" along the Columbia. If they'd read the newspapers they would dig up the fare and travel like gentlemen. Many men lose their wealth and not a few their lives, by not reading the newspapers.

A.B. Steinbach & Co., now