A Mystery of the Sea

Copyright, 1906, by McClure Newspaper

We were making the round voyage from Liverpool to Sydney, calling at Cape Town, and the day's observation had shown that we were about to be waylaid by a man of the sea.

It was driving with wind and sea, and until we fell off our course and passed it with a beating, we supposed it to be empty.

As I was looking at the sea, I saw a girl crouching in the bottom, and when we raised a shout she stood up and supplicated us with hands and arms to save her.

The bark was brought to the wind and a boat lowered, and after a little we had the girl aboard.

She had no name. There were a few biscuits left, but the water keg had been empty for at least three days.

There were no oars, no spare clothing—not the slightest thing to give us a clue to the identity of the girl or the name of the craft from which she had been cast off.

She was a young girl, and she was greatly in a physical way, but was mentally upset and looked about her so strangely that we wondered if she had ever seen a ship before.

She had given a spare ship before. She was given a spare ship before. She was given a spare ship before.

It was hoped that when the stranger awoke her mind would be clear and that we should hear her story, but in she was disappointed.

She did not seem to be affected by the storm or the loss of her home. There was nothing to draw her out. There was nothing to draw her out.

In other words, she remembered nothing previous to waking up in the state-boat after her long sleep.

She was a young girl, and she was greatly in a physical way, but was mentally upset and looked about her so strangely that we wondered if she had ever seen a ship before.

She had no name. There were a few biscuits left, but the water keg had been empty for at least three days.

With most girls the interview with Alma Kent was not one to resort to such a weapon until all others had failed.

"It is not that you object to Jack, is it?" she asked.

"No," said her father, half angrily. "Jack is all right. He may not be exactly the husband I would have chosen for you, but after having two sons and four daughters marry according to their own wishes, in spite of anything I might have said in the matter, I do not feel like making any objection to him."

"I know you will like him better the more you know him," said her eyes shone with faith in the absent one.

"No doubt I shall, little one, but I cannot let him take you away from me just yet. He must let me have you for at least another year."

"But you would have closed with tears, but Alma Kent was not one to resort to such a weapon until all others had failed."

"Shame of Modern Civilization"

By Mrs. J. G. PHELPS-STOKES, Formerly a Cigar-maker

What would the poor people do if there were no rich to work for?" asks Miss Giulia Morosini, who spends $200,000 a year on her gowns.

Before I answer that question I would like to say that when Miss Morosini thus in her own words "exhibits" her gowns her moral poverty almost reached POSITIVE IMMOBILITY.

She and women of her class are responsible for more of the spirit of CLASS HATRED of which they complain than any spirit of envy of the rich among the working people.

The rich are so intellectually barren or so STUPIDLY THOUGHTLESS that they never seem to think of the effect on the minds of girls who work hard for their living of such flaunting boasts of the amount of money spent on dress.

Miss Morosini makes the excuse that she "keeps money in circulation." Does she imagine the people who produce that wealth could not keep it in circulation JUST AS WELL AS SHE and with much more right? She speaks of her charitable work. Miss Morosini's charitable work around Riverside is well known, but it never interferes with her desire to have new gowns.

She is just typical of her class. They take 70 per cent of the wealth produced by the workers, and when, as a kind of salve to their own consciences, they return 1 or 2 per cent they expect the recipients TO FALL ON THEIR KNEES in thankfulness.

"What would the working people do if there were no rich to work for?" God willing, they would work FOR THEMSELVES! Instead of making things for idlers they would make them for workers, who would return the courtesy by making other things in return.

Women of Miss Morosini's class may not be aware of the fact that they are paupers. A pauper is one who, either through idleness or inability to work, is UNABLE TO SUPPORT HIMSELF and is a burden on the community.

The REAL PAUPER is the person unwilling to support himself and who is thus thrown on the shoulders of the COMMUNITY. Any adult who performs no service for the community has no right to take anything from it.

THAT THE CLASS OF IDLERS SHOULD HAVE SO MUCH WEALTH AS TO RUIN EVEN THEIR OWN SOULS IN RECKLESS AND EXTRAVAGANT LIVING AND THE WORKING CLASS SHOULD HAVE BARELY ENOUGH TO KEEP BODY AND SOUL TOGETHER IS THE CRYING SHAME OF MODERN CIVILIZATION.

Verdict for Dr. Pierce

Against the Ladies' Home Journal

Sending truth after a lie. It is an old maxim that "a lie will travel seven leagues without getting its heels wet," and no doubt hundreds of thousands of good people read the unwarranted and malicious attack upon Dr. R. V. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, published in the May (1904) number of the Ladies' Home Journal, with its great black display headlines, and saw how the humbly, groveling retraction, published two months later, in the same issue of the Journal, was a mere "apology" for the original article.

The retraction published in the Ladies' Home Journal, was a mere "apology" for the original article. It was a mere "apology" for the original article. It was a mere "apology" for the original article.

On Matters That Interest You

Your local paper is a necessity to you, financially and socially.

But a NEWSPAPER OF GENERAL CIRCULATION, containing the latest news of the world, is equally necessary to you.

The "up to date man" will provide himself with these two essential features of progress.

IN THE THIRTEEN-A-WEEK SPOKESMAN-REVIEW, Spokane, Wash., will be found the very latest news of the world, its matter including information on politics, commerce, agriculture, mining, literature, as well as the local happenings in the states of Montana, Oregon, Idaho, Washington and the province of British Columbia.

In addition, its columns for women, its popular science articles, its short and continued stories, its "Answers to Correspondents" and "Puzzle Problems" combine to form a home newspaper that at $1.00 per year can nowhere be excelled.

Perhaps you have something to sell—farm, a team, farm machinery. You may wish to buy something. The best possible way to do this is to advertise in the SPOKESMAN-REVIEW.
