Personal Talk With You.

If you do not read The Observer you are missing a lot. We should like to have you take it, and we know it would be profitable to you to become a subscriber. We send it two years for $2.50; one year $1.50; 12c a month in advance. Try it. Order by Postal Card, or when you can.

At any time when requested to do so, the paper will be discontinued. But we expect that all arrears will be paid before such request is made. It is easy to ask us for a statement, which will be cheerfully rendered at any time.

The Forlorn Man

This story is true. That is the events narrated are followed as closely to the original happening as they can be without going to the actual occurrence.

Matthew Tuttle was a good man, a good father and a good husband. He was comfortably off in this world's goods, happy and contented. His only child, a boy, had been born to him. This boy, named after his father, was a fine specimen of a young man. He had means in certain places where he had been visiting, but Mr. Tuttle was not at any of them.

One afternoon after business hours Mr. Tuttle did not come home as usual. His wife waited dinner an hour, 10 o'clock came, and still he did not come. Mrs. Tuttle supposed he had been out as usual, but why had he not telephoned as usual? At 11 o'clock she called up the police headquarters, requesting that they send to certain places where her husband might possibly be found. These places were visited, but Mr. Tuttle was not at any of them.

The next morning the city was ransacked for the missing man—that is, after the usual hour for his appearance at his office. That hour came and the next, and there were no signs of Mr. Tuttle. The day passed without the slightest trace of him. His wife soon fell into a condition bordering on the morose.

Weeks, months, years passed and Mr. Tuttle was not heard from. The police gave him up, considering his case one of the many in which the subject is murdered and his body never recovered. Mrs. Tuttle was not a villainous woman at all—just a warm hearted boy who loved everybody and wanted to be loved by everybody in turn. He must have the villain's part because there cannot be a second hero and because—But you shall see.

As the train sped along Jim went to the smoker—not to smoke, for he had never learned how, but because he thought Irinda might be tiring of him. When Irinda immediately took his place.

Soon after a lady and gentleman boarded the train. The lady's seat had been turned so that her back was toward the engine, the gentleman sat in full view of her. The lady bent her head, and some rice fell from her smart brown turban. The gentleman smiled, and the lady's cheeks went red as roses. Then she opened her magazine and tried to look unconcerned.

"Oh, Barney," breathed Irinda, "isn't the bride lovely? Do look at that buttery in her veil just at the corner of her sweet red mouth! See that perfect nose looking out the window. Now, quick, Barney, she is turning to her husband. See her beautiful eyes. They're as brown as her dainty hair."

Barney's ravishing eyes glanced at the beautiful lady. Barney's quick eye caught the situation, and Barney's warm heart rose to the occasion. Suddenly he turned to Irinda.

"Why, I never think of a woman's looks, whether she has a pretty face or not. That doesn't appeal to me. I know a woman who attracts me or not, according to whether or not she has magnetism. Magnetism is as good a name as any other for what no one understands. But, believe me, Irinda, magnetism is the charm of a woman, not a pretty face."

Barney's blue eyes said so much more than his tongue, rolling over so slightly his "rs," that Irinda's colorless face flushed becomingly. The eyes said that she, Irinda Bowen, had the magnetism, or whatever it was, that Barney whether or not she was pretty.

Happy thoughts fluttered around Irinda for the rest of the journey. Barney left her, and Jim came back. She smiled at him. He didn't know it, but she was smiling at the man who had been the subject of her thoughts. Barney's eyes were on her, and she was smiling at him. Barney's eyes were on her, and she was smiling at him.

"What difference does it make what you look like? You are always beautiful to me, Irinda."

He never knew why she had pushed him away when he would have put his arms around her. Stupid old Jim couldn't know that he had made a tactful acknowledgment of her magnetism, which Barney, why, Barney had never thought anything about it.

Grand opera week went by in a disposition of glory. Irinda was wonderfully happy, and every day she told herself slyly and with many blinks how much she was caring for Barney. It was not till they were homebound that the tragedy happened.

The tragedy? No, it was not the train leaving the rails and plunging down an embankment. It was only Barney's pleasant voice, rolling over so slightly his "rs"—it was only Barney making this remark to Alderly, the chaplain's husband:

"I have been noticing the ladies in this car, and I don't believe I ever saw so many beautiful ones together. Don't you know it is rare to find a really beautiful woman? If her eyes are blue, something is wrong with her chin; if her hair is black, something is wrong with her ears, while her sun seemed to leave its horizon. Barney, who never thought of a woman's looks, was discussing women's beauty. Then he had not much to say but he had said to her at all.

Irinda felt very much as she had when some one told her that George Washington and his little hatchet and William Tell and the apple were probably ever pleasant stories. But at the same time she was suddenly conscious

That Speech of Barney's

Had Irinda been beautiful or had she known that there were times when she was very charming indeed it never would have happened. Irinda's worst fault was moribundness when she remembered that she was yellow and pale eyed and had sandy hair when she would have preferred pink and white complexion, dark eyes and golden hair. She would have added dimples and beautifully arched eyebrows about it. As a matter of fact, it was only when she was remembering her ugliness that she really was ugly. Her face in her times of forgetting pictured quite pleasantly her pure spirit and loving heart.

Irinda and a jolly lot of other music lovers were on a train bound for San

HER EYES WANDERED TO THE OPPOSITE SIDE OF THE CAR.

Francisco and a crowd of grand opera, Jim, her father, was along, not because he appreciated grand opera, but because he appreciated Irinda.

So much for the hero and heroine. Next the villain, to whom his Celtic mother had given a ravishing pair of blue eyes and a tongue tuned to soft words. Barney was not a villainous villain at all—just a warm hearted boy who loved everybody and wanted to be loved by everybody in turn. He must have the villain's part because there cannot be a second hero and because—But you shall see.

"I suffered with rheumatism for over two years, says Rolland Curry, a Key West, Fla. patrolman. Sometimes it settled in my knees and lamed me so I could hardly walk, at other times it would be in my feet or hands, so I was incapacitated for duty. One night when I was in severe pain and lame from my wife went to the drug store and got a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I rubbed with it and found that the pain had nearly gone during the night. I kept using it for a little more than 2 weeks and found that it drove the rheumatism away. I have not had any trouble from that disease for over three months." For sale by Moro Pharmacy.

That she did not love and never had loved Barney. Her eyes wandered to the opposite side of the car, where Jim sat alone. A little flicker of sunshine was touching his brown hair with gold, Irinda, with a quick indrawing of her breath, remembered that it had looked just so the morning her mother died.

The doctor had told them—her father and herself—that the sick one would not live through the day, and he had gone away and left them to their sorrow. Miserably father and daughter had communed together. She must be told, but each shrink from the brown hair turning gold—contrasts between her and Jim that she had come. He had been a son to Irinda's mother, and they relegated the task to him, knowing that Jim never had shirked a duty in his life.

He remembered how he had gone about it—not smothering over the sad facts at all, but with eyes and manner sad-words so full of sympathy and tenderness and stanch hope of the unknown future that death seemed to be something of the dread. And Barney, she, at the foot of the bed, had lifted up her tear stained face and saw a ray of sunlight touch Jim's hair just as it was going down.

SUMMONS.—In the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for Sherman County. Wm. Moore and H. A. Moore, Plaintiffs, vs. J. L. Smith, Willie L. Smith, and George Meador, Defendants.

To J. L. Smith and Willie L. Smith the above named defendants: In the name of the State of Oregon: You are hereby required to appear and answer the writ of attachment and cause set for the 7th day of June, A. D. 1907, which date the last day named for the publication of this summons, and for failure to do so, the plaintiffs will apply to the court for the relief demanded in their complaint, to-wit: For judgment against you for the sum of $15,000.00, with interest thereon from the 1st day of May, 1907, at the rate of 8 per cent per annum and for the further sum of $750.00, to-wit: For the costs and disbursements of this suit, and for a decree of court foreclosing said mortgage premises subject to the mortgage of November 23, 1905, Company, and directing that the proceeds of the sale of said premises be applied to the payment of said judgment and the costs and expenses of making and sale, so far as the same will apply, and that the defendants J. L. Smith and Willie L. Smith and George Meador, and all persons claiming by, through, or under them, be forever barred and foreclosed of any right, title, or equity of redemption, and that the plaintiffs be allowed their costs and disbursements, and that the officer making such sale be authorized, empowered and directed to place the same on file with the clerk of the court on the day of sale and to certify thereon in the immediate premises.

This summons is published by order of Hon. George B. Bonnell, County Judge for Sherman County, Oregon, under date of April 24th, 1907, the first publication thereof being on April 25th, 1907, and the last publication June 7th, 1907.

E. W. LITTLEFIELD, Attorney for Plaintiffs.

Organ Grinders' Winter Report. The organ grinders of America, far less than the millionaires, have their winter resort. The organ grinders' winter resort is Italy, the Italian Riviera, and every boat that sails for Naples or Genoa in the late autumn has a steerage crowded with organ grinders. These men do so well in the winter and summer that they can afford a winter at home. Their home is a lovely one, far different from what they would get if they stayed in America. They sit home on ancient stone benches in the sunny squares of little mountain towns. Behind them rise in the blue and gold air the pine-needles of the Maritime Alps. Before them, but far below, stretches the blue and glistening flow of the sea, with tiny ships coming and going. Yes, it is very pleasant for the organ grinders at home. Pines bloom everywhere. Oranges, yellow as gold, shine among the foliage. The air is sweet with the perfume of the rose and violet farms that feed the voracious perfume factories of Genoa. And it is cheap. For 10 or 15 cents a day an organ grinder can be as happy in his winter resort as the millionaire can be in his for $10 or $15.

A Woman's Back

Has many aches and pains caused by weakness of the pelvic organs. Other symptoms: female weakness, frequent headaches, dizziness, imaginary specks or dark spots floating before the eyes, gnawing sensation in stomach, dragging or bearing down in lower abdominal or pelvic region, disagreeable drains from pelvic organs, faint spells with general weakness.

If any considerable number of the above symptoms are present there is no remedy that will give quicker relief or a more permanent cure than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It has a record of over forty years of cures. It is the most potent, invigorating tonic and strengthening medicine known to medical science. It is made of the glyceric extracts of native medicinal herbs found in our forests and contains not a drop of alcohol or harmful, or habit-forming drugs. Its ingredients are all printed on the bottle-wrapper and attested under oath as correct.

Every ingredient entering into "Favorite Prescription" has been written up by the most eminent medical practitioners of all the several schools of practice—more valuable than any amount of non-professional testimonials—though the latter are not lacking, having been contributed voluntarily by grateful patients in numbers to exceed the endorsements given to any other medicine extant for the cure of woman's ills.

You cannot afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for this well known remedy or knower of its value. It is an insult to your intelligence for him to try to palm off upon you a substitute. You know what you want and it is his business to supply the article called for. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original "Little Liver Pills" first put up by Dr. Pierce over forty years ago. Little sugar-coated granules—easy to take as candy.

People everywhere take pleasure in testifying to the good qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Mrs. Ed Phillips of Barclay, Md. writes, "I wish to tell you that I can recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. My little girl Catherine, 2 years old, has been taking this remedy whenever she has had a cold since she was 2 months old. About a month ago I contracted a dreadful cold myself, but I took Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and was soon as well as ever." For sale by Moro Pharmacy.
