Send for advertising rates.

FRIDAY, Nov. 1, 1907

To Patrons and Correspondents. Don't send us for free publication anything of an advertising character.

All local news will run till ordered out, unless otherwise specified.

Don't ask us to send you names and addresses of correspondents. This is a private matter between them and us.

Copy for ads, changes, etc., must be in the office before 2 o'clock p. m. Wednesday to insure proper care and attention.

Don't send us articles on politics, temperance or religion. Discussion of such topics only leads to violent and abusive language in the end.

Avoid personalities. Compliments delicately given are always acceptable, but even they must not be overdone, as the charge of insincerity is apt to follow a shower of pretty nothings spread broadcast.

Before coming to the city to trade readers are requested to examine The Observer advertising columns. Its active, wide-awake business man is the most accommodating, sells the cheapest, and deals the most liberally in every way.

The Observer has been established nearly 21 years, and it has some subscribers who have received it regularly for more than half a score of years.

Many of these object to having the Old Reliable discontinued at the time of their benefit, as for other reasons, we discontinue subscriptions only when notified to do so, except by agreement made at the time the account is opened, when it is noted upon the calendar to be discontinued promptly at the time specified.

All persons paying in advance at the time of subscribing, will have the benefit of the $2.50 rate for two years, or the $5.00 rate for five years. We send The Observer to any responsible person in advance at the time of their benefit, as for other reasons, we discontinue subscriptions only when notified to do so, except by agreement made at the time the account is opened, when it is noted upon the calendar to be discontinued promptly at the time specified.

Flour is higher now than it has been in 22 years. We would not object if the farmer got the benefit of the rise.

It seems funny they can't even have a plague situation in Seattle without its arousing serious political complications.

It shows the trend of "labor" in Oregon, when 102 young men in Portland in one day applied for a situation as book keeper in answer to one little 5 line advertisement.

The base ball season is over, with a casualty list made up chiefly of dead hopes in Detroit. As it was played it seems to us that it in no place ever took on enough life to court death.

Senator Fulton must leave Oregon for the national capitol on the 15th, regretting very much his inability to look once more upon Sherman county. We would be glad to have you call, Senator, but at all events the hearts of the people here are with you.

Attorney W. W. Cotton, of the Harriman system, C. F. Adams, of the Security Trust and Savings Bank, W. D. Skinner, freight agent of the Harriman lines, W. B. Ayer Portland capitalist, with Walter Witwer, chaffeur, made Burns in two days from Shaniko, via Prineville, arriving Monday night. Bro. Frank Davey wrested the secret of the trip from Granger Cotton: They were just looking at the country, "out for pleasure!" but you cannot make Kennedy and Holder believe that's all.

Former Secretary of State John W. Foster, who was a delegate for the Chinese government to The Hague, believes that the peace conference has made war between nations more difficult of initiation. The creation of an International prize court is something entirely new, and in connection with this the rights of neutrals have been more completely safeguarded. None can rightly call these conferences futile, for they are moulding opinion against warfare and are accomplishing many reforms directly.

Of all the monthly talks that Dr. Edward Everett Hale has given the readers of Woman's Home Companion, none have been more delightful than that in the current number on "Thanksgiving: then and now." With his wonderful power of reminiscing, he talks to his readers, rather than writes, on the earliest New England Thanksgivings in their Puritanic settings, and then of our latter-day celebrations, still strong of the old-time flavor, yet pregnant with possibilities in which 20th century steam cars and motors play a large part. No one could have written a more delightful Thanksgiving homily.

LIVING IN N. Y. CITY HOTELS.

In N. Y. City a man may pay $10. for a planked porter-house steak, and $25. for a bottle of wine. He may pay $1.50 for a "cheap table d'hote dinner," and be charged 25c extra if he orders no wine. He may dine for 65c with a hard working soprano yelling at his ear. "Beef and" costs 10 cents, and sustains life. Lodgings drop in price from the de luxe family suite at the Plaza at $30.00 a year, down to the 10 and 15 cent bunk in the Bowery.

The Mills Hotels, No. 3 just open, are the regulators, but are hard to classify in this descending scale. They provide well cooked and nicely served meals for a few cents, and for 30 cents a night's lodging in a spotless private room not much smaller than some of those in the expensive hotels, where the lodger may dream that he dwells in marble halls and dream no lie. A passenger elevator, a private bath, spacious and attractive reading and lounging rooms are at his service. He is in no danger from fire and his temporary home, in an architectural line, is just as beautiful and far superior to many costly hotels. For less than $5 a week one may live, well fed, well housed and well cared for.

The Mills Hotels are not a charity. If they were they would be a failure; and they are a success. They pay 4 per cent. on the investment, and the property grows more valuable. They prove that there is no necessity either for the highest prices exacted for good meals and accommodations, or for the wretched quality of meals and lodgings generally furnished for very low prices. They appear to prove that the great need of good, moderate priced hotels in any portion of the United States may be plentifully supplied at a handsome profit, in spite of the high cost of supplies and land. Mr. Mills is a public benefactor in establishing the fact, and in providing cheap and clean quarters for the 5,000 and more guests that his three hotels daily accommodate.

The eastern banks are sitting on the pot of money in their possession owned by Oregon banks and are saying to the owners "it's safe, absolutely safe; if you had it, you'd only spend it; leave it with us, but the Oregon bankers need it to help their customers buy wheat and pay freight charges."

Timely advice is given the people in the present financial trouble. The Morning Oregonian says "people can help ward off stringency by retaining full confidence in our banking institutions and allowing their money to stay in the avenues of trade as the chief instrumentality of commerce and confidence."

TO MASTER THE SHEET.

What You Must Learn if You Want to Be a Sailor. One thing you have to learn before you can write sailor after your name, and that is to master a sail. Brute force is of no account. To use brute force with a sail is like employing it to capture an elephant or run down an untamed steed. Mastering a sail is a game of strategy, finesse, diplomacy, flattery, persuasion and perseverance, with fierce energy flashed in at the right instant. You must know your sail. Sails are not all alike. What will work with a jib will fail if applied to a mainsail or topsail.

When once a man has become skilled at this game he can do more than three hubbers. I've seen three men tackle a jib and come back on the head baffled and beaten after a fifteen minute fight, and then a fellow not a quarter their combined weight go out and conquer the sail, binding it captive in ten minutes.

A sail master has five hands—two on his arms, two on his legs, and his teeth. Besides, he has knees, his elbows, the grip of his thighs, his neck, and his whole body. He must be an octopus, a boa constrictor and a monkey, combining with their qualities the patience of an ox, the quickness of a gazelle and the agility of a fox.—T. F. Day in the Outing Magazine.

His Symptoms. "Maybe that boy of yours will be famous some day," said the friend. "I shouldn't be surprised," answered Farmer Corntassel; "he does like to wear curious clothes and say things that sounds more surprisin' than sensible."—Washington Star.

A Curious Embrocation. Rattlesnake oil is preserved and prepared very carefully for use as a liniment in some parts of the world. Rheumatism and sore joints are the ailments in which it is chiefly employed. The fat is taken from the dead reptile and laid upon a cloth in the hot sun, from which the filtered oil drips into a jar. From fear that the reptile may be bitten itself the clear oil is tested by dropping a portion of it into milk. If it floats in a globule it is regarded as unadulterated. If it breaks into beads and curdles the milk it is judged to be poisonous and thrown away.—Montreal Standard.

The Poor Cat. A young wife called her husband on the telephone to tell him a tale of woe. In tear choked accents she said: "That you, dearie? Well, you know that white chicken pie I made you—that horrid old cat came in and ate it up before I could stop it." He answered, "Never mind, darling; I'll get you another cat."

FINANCIAL LID ON IN OREGON.

At the instance of the Portland Clearing House committee, which met Gov. Chamberlain in Salem last Monday night, representing and presenting the financial situation in Oregon, Gov. Chamberlain issued a proclamation which put the lid on all banks in the state for five days, by declaring the rest of the week holidays. This was in consequence of the action of the leading banks of the east refusing to ship coin to this state which the different banks have there on deposit, thus rendering it impossible for banks of Oregon to continue in the exercise of their functions, deeming such action absolutely necessary to preserve the credit and good name of the state.

Eastern banks that have adopted a system of paying in certificates and hoarding their coin were told that that would not do; that the cash must come. Hence the five days holidays; creating which Gov. Chamberlain says: "Whereas, the banks of Oregon and of the west have large balances due them from banks in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Chicago, St. Louis, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Omaha, and other eastern cities and because of the strained financial situation throughout the east the banks in said cities have refused to make shipments of coin or currency in payment of said balances due the banks of Oregon and other western banks, and

"Whereas, as a result of the action of said eastern banks it is impossible for the banks of Oregon to continue in the exercise of their functions without great injury to the industries of the state, and

"Whereas, for the common good of the people of the whole state, it is necessary that a holiday be proclaimed in order that an opportunity may be afforded to the financial institutions of the state to procure from eastern banks the balances due them as hereinbefore stated."

DOG-BOY AND GORILLA-MAN.

Strange Cases in Iowa of Reversion to Brute Types. What is regarded as strong corroborative evidence of the truth of the Darwinian theory is reported by Iowa Humane society officials after an investigation of the case of two sons of W. A. Leupardes of Wichita, Kansas county. It says a Des Moines special dispatch to the New York World.

One of the sons, sixteen years old, runs around like a dog, curls up in a ball behind the stove and snarls and barks and snarls at people as they pass. He has the characteristics of a gorilla. He shows his teeth and makes awful threats.

The Leupardes family are poor and unable properly to restrain the sons. Strange tales of their habits have alarmed the neighbors, and at night windows are locked in fear of the gorilla-man and of the dog-boy that runs with belly to the ground and barks and snarls at people as they pass. In a shed the dog-boy is heard whining when people go to the house. The father fears he will bite people.

A few days ago a party of citizens went to the father and accused the eldest son of a theft. The boy was urged to reveal the hiding place. He grinned mockingly and leaped to the rafters. Then the father placed a rope about his neck and forced him, tugging and bounding, to come and throw the end of the rope over a limb. Only then would he yield and show where the stolen articles were secreted.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jones Baird, secretary of the Des Moines Humane society and a specialist in this line of work, who recently returned from the Leupardes home, says she will communicate with eminent scientists in regard to the peculiar light which will be turned upon the origin of the human species.

BIRD FLIGHT.

Some Curious Facts About the Size of Wings and Bodies. In the attempt to discover some universal law of bird flight scientists have disclosed concerning a number of species a most puzzling paradox, perhaps the most mysterious of any organisms that the subject presents. It is that in a number of birds and insects the size of the wings exceeds in proportion to the increase in size of the body of the flying creature. The Australian crane, for instance, weighs over 300 times more than the sparrow, but in proportion has only one-seventh the wing area of the smaller bird.

This curious fact is equally striking if we compare birds with insects. If the gnat were increased in size until it was as large as the Australian crane and if the wings of the insect were enlarged to maintain the proportion they now bear to its body they would be about 150 times larger than the crane's.

It requires 3.02 square feet of wing area per pound to float the bank swallow, but to sustain the turkey vulture, a monstrous bird in comparison, requires only .68 of a square foot of wing surface per pound of body. The albatross, weighing eighteen pounds, has a spread of wing of eleven feet six inches, while the trumpeter swan, weighing twenty-eight pounds, has a spread of wing of only eight feet. The stork weighs eight times more than the pigeon, but in proportion has only half as much wing surface.—Everybody's Magazine.

Mrs. S. Rosenthal of Turner, Mich., says, "I have used Chamberlain's Cough medicine for ourselves and children for several years and like it very much. I think it the only remedy for croup and can highly recommend it." For sale by Moro Pharmacy.
