During the visit of Mr and Mrs H S McDaniel to the Rose City last week Portland one day "had a little sun," but Mrs McDaniel didn't stay to christening.

That Arlington man who claims to have discovered a process for bottling rays of the sun has nothing on the south—they have bottled moon shine down there for years.

The salmon law may be valid; but how about "striped bass in the lower Columbia river?" Bourne, Holman and Smith had better be persuaded to let that job out.

H A Stuart had a very serious attack of sickness Saturday night, arising from an ailment which he has been subject to for years. It left him quite weak for several days.

One of the latest swindles played in Oregon by which the unwary is taken in and done for, is this: The sharper walks into a jewelry store and selecting a $50 watch, leaves a check for $600, drawn on an out of town bank, leaves instructions that the watch be adjusted and that he would call for it, and the change, a week later. On returning he was informed that the check was not good. "Well, that's strange, he says, the second time that bank has done this on me; but here's the money for the watch," and he counts out $50 in currency and starts for the door. "O, by the way, he says, turning around suddenly, you'd better give me that check." It is willingly handed over to him; on the bank of it is the jeweler's indorsement. With this he can go into any bank and get it cashed, and then spend away to the next sucker.

School and Home for April has another excellent article on The Gifts of the Garden, by Prof. R F Robinson, Multnomah county superintendent of schools. The article is very appropriately illustrated. More than any other person in Oregon, Prof Robinson has given this subject that attention which its importance merits. The school garden movement is rapidly growing in the United States, and has not only proved instructive and interesting to the children, but has been a great help in improving and beautifying cities, towns and suburban residences. Waste places and school yards have been transformed with flowers, eyesores effaced by vines and shrubs, and in many places depots and public grounds that spoiled the appearance of towns have been greatly changed for the better by enthusiastic young horticulturists. Pupils will be benefitted by perusal of this topic as presented by Prof Robinson.
