Personal Talk With You.

At any time when requested to do so, the paper will be discontinued. But we expect that all arrears will be paid. It is easy to ask for a statement, which will be cheerfully rendered at any time.

HIS CONVERSION.

A Man Who Did Not Believe In Woman's Standard of Honor.

By KINGSBURY WELCH.
(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

"Girls," said Miss Spencer at afternoon tea, "what do you suppose I've heard about Harrington? He has openly avowed himself a woman hater. Let's cut him."
"Let's," said Miss Hunter.
"Let's," said every girl in the room but one.
"Are you sure you'll all keep to the agreement?" asked Miss Emerson incredulously.
"What do you take us for?" said Miss Hunter. "You're as bad as Harrington."
"Well, I'll agree," drawled Miss Emerson, "but I don't want any shirking."
"All who agree," said Miss Spencer, "hold up a hand."
Every girl except one held up a lily white hand, with some sort of bangle or bracelet dangling at the wrist. The exception was Miss Emerson.
"Aren't you with us, Emmy?"
"No."
"Why not?"
"I don't believe in judging any one unheard, and I don't believe in any snatches."
"Very well; do as you please."
That Miss Spencer was determined to keep faith in the matter is proved by the fact that she did not wait for an accidental meeting with the faithless man. She brought about one the next day. Harrington was accustomed to walk past her home every morning on his way to his office. She had often got a bow from him, but after the first he did not deign to see her there. On the morning after he had been boycotted.

Harrington decided to make a clean breast of it to the girl he loved. He told her that he loved her, but before meeting her had become entangled with another girl. Then he confided to her his affair with Miss Spencer. His candidness manifested no surprise. Indeed, she seemed to be cognizant of the whole affair. But she astonished Mr. Harrington by telling him that she could not accept a proposition from him because such a course would place her in an unfortunate position. When he asked her what that position was she declined to inform him on the ground that she could not honorably do so.
Mr. Harrington was astonished. That a woman should decline an offer of marriage on the ground that it would place her in a false position and decline to give that position through motives of honor opened up to him a new thing in the world of morals. He had not been insensible to woman's charms, which he had considered marred by their want of a high sense of honor. Here was a woman with charms and scrupulously honorable. He begged her to put him in the way to get the desired information from another, but she said that such a course would be only a subterfuge and no more honorable than telling him herself.
Nevertheless the information came. Miss Spencer was met one day by Miss Hunter walking with Mr. Harrington, and looking up at him in the fashion of a woman who means to be seductive, Miss Hunter at once invited the members of the cabal to meet at her house the next day at afternoon tea. Miss Emerson, having declined to cut the victim, was not notified. When they were assembled the hostess announced the perfidy of Miss Spencer.
Great was the indignation of the "signatory powers." Miss Wadsworth declared that Mr. Harrington should be saved from the wiles of such a girl, and after much deliberation it was decided to send him an anonymous note stating that for the protection of the sex certain girls had decided to cut him, Miss Spencer having made the proposition. The decision had been unanimous except for one girl. The note having been mailed and tea having been drunk, the girls separated.
When Harrington received the note he took it at once to Miss Spencer, telling her his opinion of women who could write such a note. Miss Spencer showed unmistakable signs of guilt and finally in tears confessed her part in the matter.
"Will you inform me," asked Harrington, "who was the girl who declined to enter upon this conspiracy?"
"Irene Emerson," sobbed the culprit.
"Irene Emerson?"
"Yes. Do you know her?"
"I didn't when this boycott was decided on. I had never seen her. Since then it has been my good fortune to have been the accidental cause of her avoiding a serious accident, and in that way I made her acquaintance. I have been converted to the fact that a standard of honor may be lived up to by persons irrespective of sex, but I regret to have to tell you that my conversion has not come through you, but the girl who, though she had never seen me, declined to join the conspiracy that you instituted. I beg to bid you good day."
Mr. Harrington called on Miss Emerson as soon as he could reach her after leaving Miss Spencer.
"The secret you were too honorable to betray," he said, "has been revealed to me. I have come to thank you for the noble part you have played and for re-establishing in me that reverence for women which all true women deserve." There are men friends of Harrington—crusty old bachelors—who are mean enough to insinuate that Miss Emerson played a deep game.

Not a bit concealed. Husband—How concealed you are, Em! You're always looking at your self in the glass. Wife—I'm sure I am not. I don't think I'm half as pretty as I really am.—Illustrated Bliss.

Those Boyhood Pies

How delicious were the pies of boyhood. No pies now ever taste so good, what's changed? The pie? No, it's you! You've lost the strong healthy stomach, the vigorous liver, the active kidneys, the regular bowels of boyhood. Your digestion is poor and you blame the food. What's needed? A complete toning up by Electric Bitters of all organs of digestion, stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels. Try them. They'll restore your boyhood appetite and appreciation of food and fairly saturate your body with new health, strength and vigor. 50c at Moro Pharmacy.

WICK BLUE OIL COOK-STOVE

as cool and white as a dairy. No smell, no smoke, no heat, no dust. No old-fashioned contrivances. It is the latest practical, scientific cook-stove. It will cook the most elaborate dinner without heating the kitchen. Boils, bakes, or roasts better than any range. Ready in a second. Extinguished in a second. Fitted with Cabinet Top, with coffee pots, towel rack, and every appliance feature imaginable. You want to know it will cook any dinner and not heat the room. No heat, no smell, no smoke, no coal to bring in, no ashes to carry out. It does away with the drudgery of cooking, and makes it a pleasure. Women with the light touch for pastry especially appreciate it, because they can immediately have a quick fire, simply by turning a handle. No half-hour preparation. It not only is less trouble than coal, but it costs less. Absolutely no smell, no smoke; and it doesn't heat the kitchen. The nickel finish, with the turquoise blue of the enameled chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet. Every dealer everywhere; if not at yours, write for Descriptive Circular to the nearest agency of the
