SHE KNEW IT ALL

By HELEN WENTWORTH

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When Miss Henderson went abroad her friends chafed her in this wise: "For mercy's sake, don't come home engaged to one of those stupid fortune hunting noblemen over there. He'll turn out a wife beater and make ducks and drakes with your money."

"Never fear," replied Miss Henderson, "that I shall be taken in, whatever I do. I am twenty-five years old, and a woman of twenty-five knows as much as she is ever going to know. I have cut my wisdom teeth, I assure you."

Miss Henderson did meet a nobleman, an Italian prince, Prince Barone, who was as well off as some of the countrymen of title, but he was a good fellow and much respected. He fell desperately in love with Miss Henderson. That he was what he purported to be was manifest from the fact that he was a member of the Italian legation at Paris, where he met Miss Henderson. She was not averse to marrying a prince and gave Barone considerable encouragement.

However, if she married him it would be without love. The anticipation of being a princess was sufficient to induce her to marry a man who only respected, and the prince had great hopes of winning her. She told him that she was going to Rome and while there she would write him her acceptance or declination of his proposition.

"You will not marry me for love," said the prince gloomily.

"Why do you say that?"

"When a woman loves a suitor she will engage herself to him first and look into his affairs and his standing afterward. You are going to Rome to look into mine. If you find them satisfactory you will accept me; if not you will reject me."

Since this was the case Miss Henderson's denial was not very effective. However, she carried out her resolution, and, finding the prince's status satisfactory in every particular, wrote him that she would marry him. Later she returned to Paris, where the two made their plans for their united future. Miss Henderson was to return to America, and the prince was to follow her in the spring. After their marriage he was to resign from the diplomatic service and stand for the Italian parliament.

When Miss Henderson bade goodby to her fiancé it was with no especial regret on her part. But she was pleased with having secured a title and one of such high degree. She had taken pains to learn all about Barone, and, remembering what her friends had said about marrying a stupid fortune hunting nobleman, thought how she would triumph over them in announcing her betrothal to a prince.

She had not long been on the ocean before the words of Barone that a woman in love engages herself first and looks up her lover's standing afterward occurred to her. On the steamer was Viscount Clarence Chesley, an English nobleman, who, seeing her on deck the day after the vessel sailed, took such a violent fancy to her that he lost no time in securing a presentation. He was a handsome man and evidently a genuine British nobleman. Miss Henderson's brother had been a great deal in England, and she had often heard him speak of Chesley. Mentioning the fact to the viscount, he said at once:

"Bob Henderson. I know him well. The last meeting we had in England was at the Ascot races. I remember it very well, since I borrowed a hundred pounds of him to back the favorite. I won, and we had a champagne supper in the evening to celebrate the event."

Miss Henderson was much pleased that her brother should have been so honored.

It was an eight day trip, short, but long enough for Miss Henderson to forget her Italian lover and give her heart to Chesley. He proposed to her. She gave him an evasive answer, intending to write Barone that she had decided that she could not love him and must break the engagement.

Upon the arrival of the steamer Chesley saw Miss Henderson to her carriage. He told her that he would not be able to visit her for a week or two, since he was going to Ottawa to see his special friend, the governor-general of Canada. The viscount was looking about him nervously and just before he closed the door handed the lady a gold headed cane, saying:

"Give that to Bob, with my compliments, and tell him I'll see him soon."

Miss Henderson was driven off, but the carriage was stopped at the end of the dock. A custom house officer opened the door and said:

"Till trouble you for that cane."

Astonished, Miss Henderson gave it to him. He shook it and, hearing something rattle within, uncovered the head and poured out a handful of diamonds.

"That cane, miss," he said, "was given you by Billy Mudge, one of the sharpest diamond smugglers in England or America. We were telegraphed that he was coming and have been on the lookout for him."

"He is Viscount Chesley," gasped Miss Henderson, "and knows my brother."

"He was a tenant on the Chesley estates and may have met your brother, but not as an equal."

Miss Henderson never mentioned this episode and is now Princess Barone.

STARTING WORK ON PANAMA

Every Country on Earth to Be Represented at the Greatest World's Fair in History. Eighty Million Dollars to Be Expended on National Celebration.

THE NATION'S BIG EXPOSITION

Composite Fleet of Navies of the World to Pass Through Panama Canal and Enter San Francisco Harbor. What the Great Fair Will Be Like.

WITHIN a few weeks' time thousands of men and teams will be engaged in leveling off the grounds of the Panama-Pacific International exposition site in San Francisco, and it is estimated that within six months 10,000 men will be employed in the construction of the material part of the great exposition at which the United States of America will celebrate the opening of the Panama canal. Responses to invitations to participate and offers of co-operation from every part of the world are flooding the exposition management, and President C. C. Moore and his thirty directors, who represent every important interest on the coast, are working night and day to keep up with the avalanche of duties that pour in upon them.

Responses of foreign countries surpass all anticipations of the exposition management. Every civilized nation on earth, every land within the sweep of both shores of the Pacific ocean and every state in the Union will be represented by the finest assemblage of displays the world has ever seen.

"San Francisco," says President Moore, "as hostess for the nation will entertain the world in 1915 with the most comprehensive exposition in history, a jubilee of nations, a splendid commemorative celebration, which shall include not only the finest features of all former world's exhibitions in recording the progress of the world, but yet in magnificence, in diversity, in its distinctive color of the west, of the orient and of all the countries bordering upon the Pacific ocean will stand alone. The nations of the world will see the finest American displays ever shown at the Panama-Pacific International exposition."

"The plans of the people of the west for the Panama-Pacific International exposition are being undertaken upon a scale of world education and interest, and the exposition is the subject of enthusiastic co-operation in every land upon the earth. San Francisco is preparing to meet the standards of a great national celebration. Every land under the stars and stripes will be represented, and the nations of the world are intensely interested in the Panama canal, America's gift to civilization, and in the exposition at which America will formally celebrate the opening of the canal. This universal interest has assured the most remarkable world's exposition in point of size, diversity and specific interest ever held."

The opening of the Panama canal will not only be the most important commercial event in the history of the world, but it will mark a supreme epoch in the lives of the nations bordering upon the Pacific, and appropriately the visitor will see in the exposition the greatest displays of strange tribes and peoples of the Pacific ocean countries ever assembled.

Down the streets of San Francisco in exposition days will pass such oriental pageants as the world has never seen. China, Japan, the Philippines, India and other oriental lands will join in parades that will rival the Indian durbar in magnificence and surpass the durbar in variety by reason of the many nations represented.

The exposition will formally open with the entrance into San Francisco harbor of a composite fleet of the battleships of the world. Upon invitation of the United States nearly 100 warships of foreign nations will first assemble at Hampton Roads and will be joined by detachments of the American navy, and the composite fleet will then be reviewed by the president and by foreign dignitaries. This fleet, the largest ever assembled, will proceed through the Panama canal, arriving in San Francisco harbor about two weeks after the exposition opens.

The exposition will be held upon the shores of San Francisco bay and of the Pacific ocean and will occupy an area of more than 1,500 acres. The grounds will describe a semicircle about San

The exposition will be held upon the shores of San Francisco bay and of the Pacific ocean and will occupy an area of more than 1,500 acres. The grounds will describe a semicircle about San Francisco, following the contours of the shore from the harbor out to and beyond the Golden Gate. The structures will be the largest and costliest ever erected for a world's exposition. The two principal locations of the exposition will be at Harbor View and in Golden Gate park. Harbor View lies as a crescent on San Francisco bay midway between the ferry building, the principal entrance to San Francisco, and the Golden Gate. Golden Gate park fronts the Pacific ocean one mile below the famous Cliff House. These two main sites and intermediate locations will be connected by a marine boulevard that will skirt the shores of San Francisco bay and also by an interurban railroad. A trackless trolley will run over the boulevard. Harbor View is within twenty minutes' walk of the Fairmont hotel and the most extensive apartment house section of San Francisco.

At Harbor View will be located a yacht harbor, the Midway and night life of the exposition and many concessions that lend themselves to night illuminations as well as great buildings to house such heavy exhibits as may be readily unloaded from ocean going vessels, such as the structures to contain the manufactures and machinery exhibits, the Palace of Liberal Arts and other industrial features.

Golden Gate park will be the seat of the permanent features of the exposition. With an area of more than a thousand acres Golden Gate park, forested and created of sand dunes, today presents one of the most notable achievements in landscape gardening in the world. The west end of Golden Gate park, comprising 560 acres, will be utilized for exposition purposes. Around a great stadium, already built, will be erected a huge concrete coliseum, the largest structure of its kind in America, capable of seating 75,000 people and in architecture like that at Rome. A chain of lakes at different levels will be connected by a working model of the Panama canal.

Lincoln park, where the Golden Gate rounds out into the Pacific ocean, commands a panorama of the Pacific ocean, of San Francisco harbor and of the hills of the city. Its area is 150 acres, and its contours rise more than 300 feet above sea level. At Lincoln park will be erected a great commemorative statue welcoming ships to the Golden Gate. Tentative plans for St. Francis memorial tower call for a structure 850 feet in height, with a base 200 feet square. The top of the tower will be almost 1,300 feet above the waters of the Golden Gate.

From Lincoln park the boulevard, turning south toward Golden Gate park, will pass through an area of 200 acres that have been secured by the directors for exposition purposes. Here will be located the foreign buildings, live stock exhibits, mining, horticulture and agriculture and other displays requiring extensive space.
