OREGON NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST

Events Occurring Throughout the State During the Past Week.

Railroad Buys Land in Seaside.
Seaside.—The old Ben Holladay home here, including a section of land south of this city, has been purchased by what are believed to be representatives of the Southern Pacific for railroad purposes, and it is believed from the operations of surveyors and other representatives of railroad interests that the Southern Pacific is gradually perfecting its plans for a railroad through this city to the Columbia river.

Near Beer Only in Name.
Roseburg.—The chemist who has been analyzing the "near beer" secured by the sheriff during his raid on 10 Roseburg near beer stands and a brewery has found in several cases that the liquor contained an intoxicating percentage of alcohol. The result of no test has been exactly made known but it is presumed all the liquor contained the same percentages of alcohol.

38 MEASURES ON BALLOT

28 by Initiative Petitions, 6 by Legislative Resolution, 4 Referendum.
Salem.—There will be 38 initiative and referendum measures to go before the people of all the state at the general election which will be held November 5. In addition to these there are seven local measures which have been filed with the secretary of state.

Although the last day for the filing of petitions was a legal holiday the office of the secretary of state remained open to receive petitions.

The seven local measures which will go on the ballot in the respective electoral districts which are affected include three measures for single tax, as provided for under the county tax amendment of 1910.

The 38 measures which will go on the ballot all over the state of Oregon are varied in many details. Of these 38 bills and amendments 28 have been proposed by initiative petitions, six have been referred to the people by resolution of the state legislature and four have been referred to the people through the medium of referendum petitions.

30,000 Great New Line into Albany.
Albany.—Midst the siren shrieks of whistles, the clanging of bells, the roll of drums and the booming of firecrackers, 30,000 residents of Albany and a dozen towns of the Willamette valley welcomed the first passenger train to be run over the new extension of the Oregon Electric Railway from Salem to Albany—a palace train bearing 800 lively boosters from Portland.

Phone Combine Made.

Medford.—The Home Telephone company, operating in Medford and the Rogue River valley, has taken over the entire plant and equipment of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph company and hereafter there will be but one telephone system in southern Oregon.

LAND RESTORED TO U. S.

Judgment of $26,250 Against Oregon Lumber Company and Others.

Portland.—Five thousand nine hundred acres in Baker and Grant counties were restored to the government and a judgment of $26,250 was given against the Oregon Lumber company, David Rogers, Grant Geddes, Joseph Barton, Frank M. Shurtliff, F. H. Atkinson, J. R. Smith, W. A. Green and J. B. Hyde in the United States district court by Judge Bean. This judgment was the result of an agreement reached out of court by John McCourt, United States district attorney, and the defendants, who were sued for fraudulently securing patents to United States lands. The money damages represent the value of timber cut.

The defendants were also indicted on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government, growing out of the same transactions and the judgment will not in any way affect the government's position in the criminal cases. It is believed that the defendants will plead guilty at the fall term of court, when their cases are called, and ask the clemency of the court. Grant Geddes, one of the defendants, is now dead.

The transactions took place during 1904, 1905, and 1906.

Joseph Ordinance Strict.

Enterprise.—The first licensed saloons in Walla Walla county in six years opened Wednesday in Joseph. The Joseph council voted to grant two licenses. The Joseph ordinance, drawn in the years since the county went dry, July 1, 1906, is one of the strictest in the state.

The Oregon hop crop this year will be the largest since 1907, unless weather conditions later in the season become extremely unfavorable, which is not likely. A conservative estimate of the 1912 crop in Oregon is 110,000 bales.

The election held in Hood River for the purpose of voting on a $90,000 bond issue with which to conduct a municipal water plant resulted in a vote of 115 for bonds and 10 against. The vote cast was only about one-fourth of the city's vote.

Governor West has revoked the parole of Calvin Judy of Douglas county, who was paroled by Governor Chamberlain after having served 16 years of a life sentence. Alleged threats made by Judy against his wife during a dispute over property rights caused Governor West to revoke the parole.

The Hawley Pulp & Paper company at Oregon City has let the contract for a steel and reinforced concrete building in which will be installed presses for printing fruit wrappers, bag machines, paper towel machines, and toilet paper rewinders. The building and equipment will involve an expenditure of $80,000.

In an opinion by Attorney General Crawford to George G. Brown, clerk of the state land board, the attorney general holds that corporations cannot purchase lands which have reverted to the state from the Warner Valley Stock company, although he holds that private individuals may purchase such lands.

STOOD ON DECK AND SAW SHIP BLOW UP

Men on Naphtha Carrier Thought World Was Full of Noise.

The life of a sailor has proved full of adventure for Walter J. Foley of Boston. Foley, who until about a year ago was a gunner in the United States navy, has been shipwrecked and survived fire and explosion in the few months he has been a merchant marine sailor.

His most thrilling experience was when the British bark Lyndhurst, with 30,000 cases of naphtha between her decks, caught fire and blew up 250 miles off of Port Elizabeth, East Africa.

"The bark left for Cape Town on Aug. 10," said Foley to a New York

THERE WAS A CRASH THAT FILLED THE WORLD WITH SOUND.

Times reporter. "We were 240 miles from port when one of the watch discovered smoke coming out of No. 1 batch. Fire at sea is bad enough, but when one has enough cargo between decks to blow up a fleet the situation is one to make you have the horrors. For seven days we were kept busy fighting fire, and there were times when we thought we had it out. Then came the time when the fire beat us and a dense volume of smoke poured out of the forward hold and the sails above us caught fire. We knew the end had come, and the crew of thirty men gathered aft. Preparations to lower the stern boats were under way when the explosion came.

"There was a crash that filled the world with sound, and then came a burst of smoke and flames. The air was filled with flying pieces of timber and fragments of tin from the naphtha cans. We rushed aft and some of the men jumped overboard without waiting for the boats to be put over. The first boat was lowered with some of the crew, and they started at once to pick up the men who had gone overboard. Captain Parnell was the last to leave, lowering himself hand over hand into the last boat. A cat, a pig and some fowls we had on board were lost. I remember for one fleeting second of catching a glimpse of the skipper's toy dog going aloft along with a hatch covering.

"The men drew off in their boats and from a safe distance saw the Lyndhurst burn to the water's edge. They found themselves adrift in open boats with only a few days' provisions on board. Fortunately the steamship Clan Maclearen came along next day and they were picked up and taken to Cape Town."

This was Foley's fourth wreck. He lost two fingers in an explosion while serving on the battleship Alabama.

Loss Life For Pictures.

A French cinematograph operator, M. Octave Friere, was gored to death recently and Lieutenant Paul Grenet, who made a motorcar trip through the wilds of Africa two years ago, was badly injured by wild buffaloes on the shores of Lake Bangweulu, at the source of the Congo. It was just as the travelers had reached their goal, Lake Bangweulu, said by the natives to be the home of monsters of prehistoric ancestry and size, that the catastrophe occurred. By the river side they saw three gigantic wild buffaloes and immediately fired. Unfortunately the beasts were only wounded, and the hunters followed them as they wheeled off in rapid flight. But suddenly the quarry turned and charged. Against this onslaught the men were practically defenseless. They were hurled about and tossed and crushed them, inflicting terrible injuries. Lieutenant Grenet had his jaws broken and was badly crushed. His colleague was knocked down, tossed and gored and only survived his injuries a few hours.—New York Evening Post.

Stood on His Head All Night.

After standing on his head all night, a prisoner in a narrow grate into which he had fallen head first, Charles Stokes, a laborer of Auburn, N. Y., was discovered in a barn and rushed to a hospital.

Stokes entered the barn to seek a night's lodging, and in walking about in the dark fell into the chute. His arms were pinned to his sides and unable to move, he was forced to inhale the autocuring grain chaff all night. He was discovered by a companion who summoned the police and Stokes was pulled out, black in the face, but not seriously hurt.—New York Tribune.

Depressing.

"Were there laughter and cheer during your speech?"
"Well," answered the youthful statesman, "there weren't many cheers, but now and then people in the audience looked at one another and laughed."—Washington Star.

TRAVELING STORES.

Portable Shops on Wheels a Curious Feature of Cuban Life.

Among the many interesting things to attract the attention of the tourist in Cuba are the traveling stores, consisting of all sorts of queer vehicles which traverse the city and rural districts.

These portable shops are constructed by an ingenious mechanic so as to display their wares in the best advantage. Every article made in a household and wearing apparel of all kinds are on sale, and the owner of the wagon, which resembles a department store, boasts that he can supply dry goods and notions of all kinds, from a paper of needles to a ready made gown. The sides of a shop on wheels are made of glass and so arranged as to give them the appearance of a shop window.

Perfumery is one of the leading articles sold in this way, for, however poor the natives may be, they always have money enough to purchase colognes and generally the most expensive varieties.

During carnival season a plentiful supply of masks, caps and grotesque suits is added to the stock. Men with pinbeards laden with limes and lemons or cooking utensils go about the streets of Havana, offering their goods to the women who constantly pass out from between the bars of the stores. These carts have the appearance of a street organ and are pushed along the splendid smooth avenues of the city with ease. Often men will carry their stock, displaying it on a pole to which crosswise sticks have been fastened, like the old fashioned clotheshorse. Toys also form a part of the stock of these human delivery wagons.—Leslie's Weekly.
