

SUMMARY OF THE OREGON NEWS

The Rapid Reader's Review of Recent Reports Rewritten

Fright, presumably from being held up or accosted, caused the death of Mrs. R. J. Prince, of Portland.

The assessed valuation of the public service corporations doing business in Hood River county amounts to nearly $2,072,000.

Governor West has named Floyd Bilyeu, of Portland, and H. H. Clifford of Baker, as members of the state fish and game commission to fill vacancies caused by resignations.

Indians are said to be killing off the deer that cross the Klamath reservation and are taking all wild fowl eggs. Senator Lane is asked to report the matter to the Indian bureau.

Frank Simmons is suspected of having killed his mother, cousin and himself, in a cottage in Portland. The bodies were found by a 12-year-old girl of the family.

Governor West is considering the plan of providing unemployed men with work clearing logged off land. Housing accommodations would be in the form of tent cities.

Fruit growers of Oregon, meeting at Portland, declare that limiting of working hours may prove a menace to the pickers and packers of the state.

As an attraction which Bakerites believe will be a rival to Portland's famous Christmas swim, the Baker country club plans for an open golf tournament, medal play, to be staged on Baker links Christmas day.

Marvel Lowrey, aged 15, of Alsea, committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid while in a fit of despondency over the fact that she could not have pleasures the same as other girls.

Mrs. J. H. Koberg, who resides on a farm east of Hood River, held up two suspects with a revolver as they were trying to enter the house of a Japanese near her home, and detained them until the arrival of the sheriff.

State dairy and food commissioner Mickle has started a war on all dealers who are said to be selling imported New Zealand butter, branded as the home product. Evidence of alleged violations has been laid before the grand jury.

The annual meeting of the Polk County School Officers' Association will be held at Monmouth Saturday, December 20. The first school officers' association in the state was formed in Polk county about eight years ago, and meetings have been held each year since.

State Engineer Lewis announces that $3700.21 would be due the state January 1 for power development under permits issued by his department. The fees represent a charge of 25 cents for each theoretical horsepower a year, assuming 50 per cent plant efficiency.

It is claimed that water power development is being retarded in this state through the uncertainty of what the annual fee charged by the state will be and the revocable permit issued by the government for power sites on government land, according to State Engineer Lewis.

Corporation Commissioner Watson has instituted in the supreme court mandamus proceedings against State Treasurer Kay to compel him to pay a warrant for legal services issued to Claude McCulloch, state senator and assistant of the corporation commission.

The Pacific Coast Rescue mission of Portland has filed a request with the Pendleton Commercial club for the carcasses of 1000 of the jackrabbits to be killed during the rabbit drives in Umatilla county, and these will be used for food in the mission stations in the cities of the coast. The Pendleton club has promised to ship the rabbits after each drive.

The Coos county Good Roads association has decided to petition the county court to call a special election to vote on a $400,000 bond issue for road building. Of the amount it is agreed that $100,000 shall be used from Bandon to the Curry county line, $70,000 for the road to Ten Mile lakes, and $270,000 on the road through Myrtle Point to Douglas county. It is the plan to make hard surface roads.

At Salem Judge Galloway has granted permanent injunctions against the authorities, in which he upholds the contentions of the "wets" that the elections, that in November and the city election in December, were invalid, so far as the local option issue was concerned. If the supreme court upholds Judge Galloway it will mean that all cities where the "drys" won at the November election will remain "wet" until another election.

Unless the existing statutes relating to the registration of voters for the primary and general elections in November next year can be harmonized, the county clerks and other officials will encounter difficulties, according to Sam Koser, deputy secretary of state, who has made an extensive study of election laws. Mr. Koser says the situation is the result of the recent decision of the supreme court declaring invalid chapter 223 of the 1913 laws, providing for permanent registration of voters.

OREGON NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST

Events Occurring Throughout the State During the Past Week.

The plant now is turning out from 100,000 to 200,000 fry each day, the variation being caused by the difference in climatic conditions.

Would Oust Mayor and Officials.
Baker.—The state of Oregon through District Attorney Godwin, has brought suit against all municipal officials of the town of Cornucopia, Baker county, including Mayor Robinson, members of the council, recorder, treasurer and marshal, seeking to have them removed from office, alleging that irregularities in charter election, makes it invalid and illegal. It holds that incumbents illegally usurped offices and asks court to oust them.

ROAD PLANS NOT MADE

State Highway Improvements Not Decided Definitely.
Salem.—Although the state highway commission has not decided upon a definite plan as to how all the money raised for state highway improvement under the law passed at the recent session of the legislature creating the commission should be expended, it has made arrangements to begin active work about June 1, when the money for next year will become available. The commission has decided to expend part of the money in providing supervision of road construction by county courts, when desired, and the remainder will be used either in building an experimental thoroughfare to determine the merits of the various hard-surface pavements, or in building a stretch of the Pacific Highway between this city and Portland.

The commission has decided that all work done by it shall be hard surface, the law providing that durable roads shall be constructed.

Flax Mill is Favored.
Oregon City.—Farmers of many parts of the county and valley are interested in a proposition to erect a $200,000 flax mill in Oregon City, and many of them have promised to sign agreements to produce the material in case the city raises $50,000 required and obtains the mill.

West Pardons Peacock.

Astoria.—The circuit court jury returned a verdict acquitting F. Ferdinand Fernandette of the charge of murdering his wife. The women's automobile statement that she stabbed herself was the main evidence in the defendant's behalf.

Wheat in Need of Gluten.
Pendleton.—In an attempt to raise the percentage of gluten in wheat grown in Umatilla county, a few local farmers are importing some seed grain from Canada.

What She Wanted.
She walked into the public library and sweetly said:
"I would like 'The Red Boat,' please."
The librarian diligently searched the catalogue and came back with:
"I don't think we have such a book."
Flushing a bit, she said sweetly:
"May the title be 'The Scarlet Tachit'?"
Again she looked, with the same result. Then with her pretty fingers she dove into her bag, consulted a slip of paper and said:
"Oh, I beg pardon. I mean the 'Red-hat'."—Glasgow Herald.

Elvin's Girl

A Christmas Story

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Caleb Wren brought the letter from the postoffice and waited impatiently while his wife slowly read it.
"What does he say, Martha?"
"I can't make out all of it, but he ain't coming home for Christmas," she said in a disappointed tone.
"Sho! Can't he get away?"
"Yes; he's going to have two days off, but he says if we don't mind he'll stay down there with some friends. I was afraid the city would wear him away from us." Martha Wren's voice shook.

Caleb dropped his hand on her shoulder, and his comforting pressure assured her. Even if their son, Elvin, did not care enough about them to come home for Christmas, why, they had each other. Neither one voiced this sentiment, but they knew and understood. To make it worse, it was the first Christmas Elvin had spent away from the home, and they had made many innocent plans for his happiness.
"We couldn't expect him to always come home," said Martha loyally.

"DID YOU HEAR WHAT HE SAID?"
"Some day Elvin will be getting married, and we've got to get used to being alone."
"I always hoped when he got married that there'd be more home holidays," murmured Caleb.

"Somebody's knocking at the door," said Martha.
Caleb went to the side door and admitted a little woman, dried and withered, with faded brown eyes and a nose that always twitched with excitement when there was news to be imparted. It was Sarah Dean.

"It's growing colder," she said.
"Wind's changed," remarked Caleb.
"I guess it's going to snow now."
"Good Christmas weather," said Mrs. Dean hurriedly, as though the talk about weather was merely a preface to what she had come to say, as undoubtedly it was.

"It is nice to have a white Christmas," murmured Martha, intent on her sewing.
Sarah Dean eyed the letter in Martha's lap. "Well, I expect you'll be glad to see Elvin home again," she remarked briskly.

Caleb tramped out into the kitchen and began to rattle around the stove. A plunk splash came into Mrs. Wren's check.
"We don't expect Elvin home this Christmas," she said in a tone of mild surprise.
"Oh, I expect there are other attractions in the city," Sarah nodded her head meaningly.

"Of course there's much more going on there than in a little place like Fenwick village," admitted Elvin's mother.
"To say nothing of the girls!" blurted Mrs. Dean.
Mrs. Wren ruffled. "What girls?" she asked stiffly.

"Oh, I was only speaking in a general way," said Sarah hastily. "Boys will be boys, and I did hear—" She hesitated tantalizingly.
"You hear a lot in Fenwick village," remarked Martha Wren energetically.
"I'm real glad you came in, Sarah. Now I can give you that cake recipe you asked for. I copied it all out the other day."

"I'd admire to have it," returned Sarah as Martha went to the desk in the corner and rummaged in the pigeon-holes.
"It takes four eggs," said Martha as she gave the paper to her visitor.
"Eggs in high, too, but then I can make half the quantity, just to try it. James Bliss came home yesterday from the city."
"Oh, did he?" James Bliss was a Fenwick boy who worked in the same office with Elvin Wren, her husband.
"James said he saw Elvin Sunday."

"Yes, I expect he sees him every day too."
"James says Elvin has got a girl!" she announced blurtly.
Martha started slightly; then her shoulders stiffened proudly.
"I expect she's a mighty nice girl, too," she observed calmly.

"I hope so," retorted the vanquished Sarah, and she immediately departed.
After the door had closed behind Mrs. Dean, Martha looked forward in her chair and called to her husband.
"Caleb," she said in a strained voice.
"Did you hear what she said?"
"Yes; you mean about Elvin?" He came into the room and sat down beside her rocking chair.
"She said he had a girl, ten? It funny he hasn't said anything about it to us?" Her voice trembled.

Caleb shook his grizzled head. "May be it seems strange to us that he hasn't said anything, but again he might feel bashful about it. Elvin's quiet, you know."

"Yes, he is."
"I was like him, I know, when I was courting you, Martha. I was sketched to death for fear my folks would find it out, not because they would care but only because it was such a tender sweet secret I didn't want to spill it all by having to explain everything."

Reticent Caleb Wren stumbled through this comforting speech and was rewarded by seeing his wife's warm smile as their hands clasped.
"I see," she murmured softly—"I see how it is with Elvin."

"I wish he could have come out here just for the day. It's only twenty miles." Caleb needed a little comfort now.
"I reckon he will, pa!" cried Martha.
"When the day comes I'll bet he does come. I'm going to get all ready for him just the same. What say?"

"All right," smiled Caleb, and with this enjoyable prospect before them although both believed it to be merely a delusive hope, they went on with their Christmas preparations.

Christmas morning dawned cold and clear. Over field and farmhouse and winding road the snowy blanket was spread, and the tops of the pine trees wore tufts of white. Through the snow tops of the fence rails showed black in the sunlight.
"Looks like a picture," murmured Caleb as he peered from the window.
"I guess there's good sleighing," responded Martha. "I wouldn't wonder if Elvin came out in a sleigh."

Caleb said nothing. His heart was heavy within him. He had missed the companionship of his only son when the boy had gone to the city to work, but Elvin had been keen to come home at every opportunity. Sundays and holidays invariably found him arriving on the first train.

This would be a sad Christmas for Caleb and his wife in spite of the wreaths of green laurel that Martha had hung in the windows and the pantry filled with good things to eat.

The dinner was on the table. There was a place set for Elvin, and Caleb had just thrust the blade of the carving knife into the brown breast of the turkey when there came the jingle of sleighbells. Caleb paused in his carving and listened. Martha grew quite pale.

The bells came nearer. A sleigh was entering their yard. It passed the window, a cutter with two persons. Martha and Caleb reached the door together.

"He has come!" exclaimed Caleb excitedly.

"Of course he has. I expected him," reproved Martha, for she had faith in prayer, and she had prayed as only a mother can.

Standing in the doorway, they saw their handsome son assisting a girl out of the sleigh, such a sweet faced, brown eyed, homey looking girl that Martha's heart warmed to her at once. She felt proud of Elvin. She might have known that he would choose the right kind of girl.

Elvin's face was flushed and happy as he led the girl to his parents.
"Mother and father," he said slowly.
"This is Miss Winters. She's a friend of mine, and I invited her out to eat Christmas dinner with us. You see, I couldn't stay away."

"Come right in, dearie," said Martha, and she bent and kissed the girl, while Caleb shook her hand warmly.
"I was just carrying the turkey," said Caleb as he set another place at the table.

"I'm afraid you'll think it strange that I come home with your son," said Miss Winters as she emerged from her fur, a demure slip of a girl with whom Caleb fell in love at once.
"Not at all. We're real glad to see you!" cried the delighted Martha.

"I'll explain everything at table," promised Elvin, and he did.
Miss Winters was an orphan who boarded in the same house with Elvin Wren and who by the same fortune worked beside him in the same office. He had planned to take her to a hotel for a Christmas dinner, but as the day approached he grew to thinking of the farm and of his lonely parents. So he suggested to Dulcie Winters that they ride out to Fenwick and surprise his people.

It was a joyful occasion for both Martha and Caleb. Before them they saw enacted the same sweet story of awakening love that both of them had experienced in their own youth. Martha had mentally planned the wedding before they reached the mince pie, and she told Caleb afterward that she just knew that when Elvin and Dulcie were married Elvin would come back to the farm and that Elvin's wife and children would comfort them in their old age.

"I don't dare contradict you, Martha," he whispered, "not after what you expected to happen today and what has happened. It's been a happy Christmas, wife."

"I just prayed, Caleb; that's how it happened," said Martha.

An Inducement.
"Do you think you are able to support my daughter in the style to which she has been accustomed?"
"I don't know, sir, but I'll tell you what I can do."
"What's that?"
"I can save you about 50 per cent of her present cost to you."—Detroit Free Press.

Friendship.
Friendship is the scarlet thread let down from the windows of heaven to bind human hearts together.

Mirrors and Sunlight.
Never allow a mirror to hang in the sunlight or the backing will become clouded.

Chronic Dyspepsia.
The following unsolicited testimonial should certainly be sufficient to give hope and courage to persons afflicted with chronic dyspepsia. "I have been a chronic dyspeptic for years, and of all the medicines I have taken, Chamberlain's Tablets have done me more good than anything else. Says W. G. Mattinson, No. 7 Sherman St., Haverhill, N. Y.: 'For sale by all dealers.'—Advertisement."

Proved it.
Mrs. Brown arrived late at the regular meeting of her card club and appeared quite flustered, unlike her usual calm, well poised self. Upon being asked the cause of her apparent perturbation, she explained that while waiting for the street car she had been greatly annoyed by a strange man, who insisted upon talking to her.
"What did you do?" inquired her sympathizing friends.
"Well, to show him I was a lady, I slapped his face!"—Judge.

They Make You Feel Good.
The pleasant purgative effect produced by Chamberlain's Tablets and the healthy condition of body and mind which they create make one feel joyful. For sale by all dealers.—Advertisement.

One Worse.
"The most disgusting person on earth," said the man on the car, "is in my opinion, the woman who is constantly nagging her husband. I mean the kind of a woman who never leaves a man alone, who gets in the habit of finding fault with everything he does, of dictating what he shall eat and wear, when he shall come home, whom he shall know. Such a person is the most horrible specimen of humanity."
"No, she isn't," denied the other man quietly.
"What's any worse?"
"The man who will stand for it!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicines.
If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of capillary bronchitis and pneumonia, use cough medicines that contain opium, morphine, heroin and other sedatives when you have a cough or cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. It cleans out the culture beds or breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonia never results from a cold unless Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It has a world wide reputation for its cure. It contains no morphine or other sedative. That Held Him.
"But listen a moment, Matilda. Don't you think a good husband ought to tell his wife of her faults?"
"Lysander, a good husband doesn't think his wife has any faults."—Chicago Tribune.

A Dark Hint.
Somebody was talking to a newly married couple who were spending their honeymoon at Scarborough. "You must not leave Scarborough till you've seen the cemetery," he said. "It's well worth a visit!"
They said they would go, but they forgot about it until too late. Then the young wife reproached her husband.
"George," she said, "you haven't taken me to the cemetery yet."

"Well, dear," was the reply, "that is a pleasure I must defer until some time in the future."—Pearson's.

How to Bankrupt the Doctors.
A prominent New York physician says: "If it were not for the thin stockings and thin soled shoes worn by women the doctors would probably be bankrupt." When you contract a cold do not wait for it to develop into pneumonia but treat it at once. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is intended especially for coughs and colds, and has won a wide reputation by its cures of these diseases. It is most effective and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all dealers.—Advertisement.
