Disastrous Hail Storm.

Sunday afternoon, the 12th, about four o'clock, a severe hail storm struck Sherman county at the John Shassen farm west of Kent and two miles east of Buck-hollow, following a course north-easterly until in the neighborhood of Rutledge, when it veered directly east and passed into Gilliam county.

Several fields of ripened grain were ruined, some entirely and others partially. In some of the fields visited the heads of grain were broken off and driven into the ground until they were hidden, leaving the field with an appearance of being cleanly threshed. In other fields the damage was spotted, there being patches of several acres left for the harvester.

In other places where the grain had not fully matured there did not appear to be any damage, and in several others it is estimated there will be a gain in the probable amount of wheat the field will yield. Where the land was in summer fallow the ground was packed by the hail, and the rain that followed close after smoothed some of the fields until they have the appearance of an improved city street.

L. Barnum, G. B. Bourhill and W. H. Ragsdale each made a separate investigation of the damage shortly after reports of the storm were received, and they unite in reporting the damage sustained by the wheat fields at not more than $60,000, and that this may fall to as low as $52,000. Some wheat fields are entirely ruined, but a number are hurt but a small per cent of the amount claimed by those directly interested when the storm damage was first under consideration.

This damage is confined entirely to the Kent and Rutledge districts; in other parts of the county there were storm visitations, notably Monkland district, but this was confined entirely to a heavy rain, and substantial benefits in matured grain will accrue.

It has been estimated by those who yearly study crop conditions in Sherman county that the yield of wheat from Sherman county this year will be the largest of any year in the history of the county, and while the storm of last Sunday will affect some of our farmers directly, the county as a whole will be immensely benefitted by the rains and that the increased yield will easily be an offset to the damage received.

The New Studebaker Six Cylinder.

Walther-Williams Co will have at Moro and Wasco, next Sunday, their new model Studebaker six cylinder car for purposes of demonstration. You are invited and requested to be at either of the two places and see this car, which is the latest in automobile engineering.

There are special features added to this model six that are special on this car and add a great deal of comfort to auto riding. The price at which it is offered is special, too, and, all in all, you will miss something if you do not happen to see the new model six Studebaker.

The car will be used next Sunday between here and Wasco for demonstration and Walther-Williams Co. want you to see it, and also you yourself want to see the latest in auto engineering.

Be sure and call at Hotel Moro Tuesday and Wednesday, July 21st and 22d, and let Drs. Lowe and Turner show you the new double vision glasses, which have no unsightly lines or seams, to catch the dirt, strain the eye or come apart; one light, solid piece of glass which enables you to read or do close work, and see distant objects perfectly; the glasses look like a single pair, yet answer the purpose of two. Satisfaction guaranteed. Free demonstration.

An Error Rectified.

The Observer published a few weeks ago an article regarding an exhibit from this county at the state fair in which was stated that the state fair management made an allowance of $100 to each county making an exhibit and that in addition each county exhibit had an even break for winning an extra $150.

This information was given the Observer by a representative of the state fair board, and is now to be changed to read that the representative "was under the impression that the board of fair directors offers $100 to each county which makes an exhibit; this is erroneous. It is true that $100 is offered for each county which makes an exhibit, but this money is COMPETED FOR pro rata, according to the number of points scored; 66 points being the lowest allowed.

"In addition to this money, being divided as stated above, prizes in the sums of $50, $25, $15 are offered for the three counties in each district scoring the highest number of points. The method employed makes it possible for a county to receive $250 as a maximum award, but no minimum amount of award is guaranteed.

"We are writing you with reference to the matter in order that there will be no possible chance of a mistake for however much we would wish to have your county represented by an exhibit we would much rather not have you come than to come under a misapprehension."

The above under quotation is contained in a letter from the state fair board to F. E. Fortner, secretary of the local fair board. It means that if a county exhibit loses 35 points of the standard set no aid will be given towards paying the expense incurred; also the $100, as many times multiplied as there are county exhibits, is open to the entire state, by counties.

We understand that Sherman county, as a result of Mr. Tozier's visit, had pledges for about four car loads of exhibits, but we do not know whether or no the effort will continue.

Sunday School Scholar Rewarded.

Little Lanora Amidon, not yet six years old, pupil in the beginners class of the Presbyterian Sunday school was awarded a special prize this week by her teacher, Mrs. Carrie Jackson, for completing all the class sewing cards for the quarter just ended.

The cards, to be properly finished, must have the picture of the animal or object printed on the card worked by the pupil in either paints or sewing. Lanora, choose painting; the work was neatly done and at Sunday school the last day she had not lost one.

Each Sunday during the last quarter Mrs. Jackson said that Lanora could be depended on being ready to repeat the Golden Text for the lesson.

Fatal Harvest Accident.

Hiram S. Coy, son of Geo. W. Coy, was fatally injured Friday afternoon July 10, east of Monkland at the W. W. Nichols farm, better known as the Joe McDonald place.

The young man was driving derrick team for the Wm. Myers heading crew, stacking with nets. In net stacking the starting strain is sudden, sharp and severe to lift the more than ton of grain and straw from wagon to stack and in this instance, just as the two horses met the strain, both traces on one harness broke and the end of the double tree, flying in a circle, hit the young man, who was walking close behind the team, a hard blow in the stomach and intestines.

Dr. C. L. Poley was immediately called and applied all means possible that would relieve the suffering of Mr. Coy; all other means failing it was decided an operation be performed to obtain relief from the acute suffering, but just as arrangements for the operation had been completed the young man died, death occurring at three o'clock Saturday afternoon. The funeral was from the Monkland church; Rev. A. J. Adams preaching the sermon; interment was at Rose cemetery.
