FILIPINOS WANT AMERICA TO GIVE INDEPENDENCE

Maximo M. Kalaw Declares U. S. Cannot Consistently Refuse "Self-Determination."

By MAXIMO M. KALAW, Secretary of the Philippine Mission, Author "The Case for the Philippines," "Self-Government in the Philippines," etc.

Maximo M. Kalaw, seen in black and white?

Senator Shogun may think no people is capable of self-government that does not establish the judicial recall, or that has no Billy Sunday. John Smith of Somerville may think no people is capable of self-government that does not vote his democratic ticket, or go to church on Sundays.

"Capacity for self-government" is as broad and elastic as the world, and if that should be the criterion for the granting of Philippine independence, America might as well say to the Filipinos, "I will give you independence when it pleases me to do so."

Fortunately, the American promise to the Philippines is not based on such obscure and abstract conditions. It is based on a definite, tangible thing. When America, through her Congress, officially told the Filipino people that they would be granted their independence as soon as they could establish a stable government, no abstract or obscure condition was meant. Stable government, according to American usage, means a certain, definite thing.

The United States promised the Philippines the same thing, that "when they have established a stable government, then American troops would be withdrawn." As soon as the Cuban people elected a government suited to themselves, capable of maintaining order and fulfilling all international obligations, there was a stable government in Cuba, and American troops were withdrawn.

When Congress passed the Jones law, it simply borrowed the phrase "stable government" from the Cuban history and applied it to the Philippines. The history of Philippine legislation shows that in black and white. With full knowledge of what it meant, the Filipino people accepted the Jones law and immediately began setting up the stable government required by Congress as a pre-requisite to independence. The stable government is now a fact. It is indeed more than that; it is an undisputed fact.

The official representative of the United States in the Philippine Islands, the Governor General, reported to the American Congress and the administration that "the Filipino people have established the stable government demanded by Congress as a pre-requisite to independence, namely, a government elected by the suffrage of the people, which is supported by the people, which is capable of maintaining order and of fulfilling its international obligations."

The Philippine question is therefore no longer a question of politics, argument or supposition. To the Philippine mind, at least, it is now a question of whether the United States is ready to discharge its own obligations fully and completely. America went before the world in the recent war as the avowed champion of "self-determination" and Filipinos cannot see how America can consistently refuse to act.

The Filipino people, however, have no grudge or grievance against the American people. There is a message of friendship and gratitude. They seek independence as the natural and logical outcome of America's promise to the islands and of America's solemn promise to them. They are willing to give privileges and concessions not incompatible with their national welfare.

The Filipino people are willing to accept independence under any of the following conditions: Under a League of Nations, guaranteeing its territorial integrity; under the protectorate of the United States for the first few years; under a treaty of neutrality between the United States, England, Japan, France and other powers, or even without any condition whatever—absolute and complete independence. They have no fear of Japan. Philippine independence, in our opinion, is not inimical to Japanese interests. The Japanese are now free to come to the Philippines, but at the present time there are less than 10,000 Japanese in the islands. There are six times as many Japanese in California as there are in the entire Philippine Archipelago.

The Filipinos are willing to take their chance as a nation. Smaller nations beset by graver problems and dangers have taken a more hazardous chance at freedom, and have succeeded.

Coal - Situation ALARMING!

The coal situation in the United States today is rapidly becoming alarming.

It is impossible to secure mine labor.

The car situation is becoming acute and of nation wide scope with no immediate relief in sight.

Due to the long hard winter coal stocks of both commercial consumers and industrial users are depleted.

The situation is most unusual

PHILIPPINO ORCHESTRA COMING

Six Native Musicians From the Philippines, a Feature Musical Attraction at Chautauqua

During the past winter the Royal Filipino Sextet has been a feature musical attraction in the great hotels of the East. They have established firmly the claim so often made for them—that they excel any other Filipino orchestra ever presented in this country. These six natives from the Islands far across the Pacific have played together constantly for six years and they play today as one man. Their repertoire seems to be unlimited, playing classical music or popular in endless variety and always in a manner to delight even the most musically critical.

AUTHORITY ON SUPERVISED PLAY

T. Dinmore Upton to Lecture at Chautauqua.

T. Dinmore Upton, who is to present one of the most worth-while lectures of Chautauqua week, was formerly Athletic Director at two of our largest cantonments. Before that time he was Superintendent of Municipal Playgrounds, Grand Rapids, Mich., and is rated as one of the foremost authorities on recreation in the country.

Capt. Upton will give western audiences the story of things he has learned through many years of experience with youngsters. He will make you think deeper on the question of child health probably than you ever have before. He will leave with you a definite constructive message in his lecture "Recreation—the Maker of Men."

"Specially in Winter."

"I see you have a great many antebellum homes about here," remarked the visitor.

"So we have," replied the Southern planter. "Most of them are falling into ruins, though."

"But I thought the South had struck its stride and was now progressive!"

"That's the very reason why those antebellum mansions are being deserted. They are long on looks and short on comfort."

Make Living From Flint Pebbles.

The flint pebble industry gives employment to many women and children along the French coast between Havre and Dieppe. The pebbles collected in and near Havre are selected for their spherical shape, and are used for pulverizing in certain industries, particularly in the manufacture of cement and in copper mines, being employed in the interior of large crushers.

Longevity and Right Living.

What is one man's meat may not exactly be another man's poison, yet a dozen or more theories may be given as to how long life may be attained, but all of such theories are constantly being set at naught by real facts. For instance a great austerity did not kill St. Anthony, who is said to have lived to be one hundred and five. Again the luxuries and dissipation of court life permitted Titian to paint an excellent picture when he was ninety-six years old. However, right living, while not so noticeable in any individual, has no undoubted influence to increase the length of life in the offspring.

Watching His Step.

"No doubt you will leave footprints on the sands of time." "I don't know," answered Senator Sorghum. "Politics out my way has been requiring too much gum-shoe work to make the footprint prospect very favorable."
