MAKING THEM AMERICANS

How few of us realize the importance of making over the foreigner — of implanting American ideals, ideas and common sense in place of socialistic and maybe anarchistic theories.

Dick Abell manager of the W W M Co. of Kent has quite a force of men putting in a concrete foundation under the warehouse. They have been handicapped by a shortage of gravel.

Fred Haynes and wife who made a trip over land to California to visit their daughter Mrs. Marjorie Waldner returned Sunday. Mrs. Waldner returned with them after an absence of three years.

C. E. Johnson has resigned as agent in Sherman county for the E. O. L. Co. and has accepted a position as cashier with the Bank of Moro, beginning July 1st.

Moro Presbyterian church is planning to observe the 35th anniversary of its organization on Sunday, July 9th. At the morning service messages will be read from former pastors of the church. The service will conclude with the observance of the Lord's Supper.

Karl Schade and family will spend the Fourth at home in Moro. His father and nephew, who have been visiting here from Portland, will remain until after that date. Mr. and Mrs. A. Robinson, the latter Mr. Schade's sister, will make the auto trip from Portland accompanied by another sister in time to spend the Fourth in Moro.

James Hanna returned Monday from a two weeks trip to his old home state of Minnesota. One of his greatest pleasures of recent years was that he stepped off the train at Hixon, Minnesota, into a Home Town reunion of pioneers that had lived in and helped build up that section of Minnesota fifty years ago.

Mrs. O. A. Ramsey returned Monday from a brief visit in Portland.

Dr. Howard Goye was a business visitor from Wasco in Moro on Monday.

Mrs. Leah Sibray, from Portland, is visiting with her parents, E. A. Cushman and wife.

Rev. Henry G. Hanson will preach at the Gorman School house next Sunday afternoon at 3:00.

Louis Olds, from Grass Valley, attended Annual Field Day at the experiment station Wednesday.

L. L. Peetz and son Forest were down from Camp Sherman part of the week, returning Thursday morning.

J. A. Keller took a Deering barvester outfit through town Wednesday which he had bought from A. Provoost for his Klondike farm.

Foss & Co have been busy the last few weeks building hitches for combine harvesters. The last one finished was a 27-horse hitch for Neil McDonald.

L. J. Foss is a visitor this week at the home of his son, J. F. Foss. He is en route to his home at Terrebonne after a visit of several weeks with relatives near Pendleton.

Elwood Ginn has been busy the past week placing culvert drains at the street intersections on Fourth street. Completion of this work places the improvement on Fourth street on a par with that of First and Main streets.

T. W. Alley and family returned Tuesday from a pleasant outing spent at East Lake, 35 miles southeast of Bend. Tom says the last 18 miles through the woods is a fine change from the roads around this part of the state.

F. E. Fagan, former principal of Moro schools, wife and children, of Woodburn, Oregon, came up from The Dalles Sunday with Hugh Fagan, brother of F. E., in the latter's car. Mrs. Fagan and the children remained on a visit.

Roy F. Dean and wife returned Sunday from an auto trip as far south as Los Angeles. On the way south they stopped at San Francisco to attend the Shrine convention. The trip home from Los Angeles took two days to San Francisco and three from there to Moro.

Not long ago a certain worthy motion picture created a furore in all the "big towns" of the country. Saturday night this movie will be shown at the Moro Theatre. "Idols of Clay," it is entitled, and it certainly lives up to the name it has won at previous showings.

C. C. Young and wife motored here from The Dalles on Sunday. Mr. Young is a son of A. M. Young of this city, and is foreman of the roundhouse in The Dalles. Accompanying Mr. Young and his wife to Moro were the former's sister, Mrs. Z. A. Watkins, and children, of Tygh Valley, who have been visiting in The Dalles.

By what may be gathered from street conversations, Moro will be a deserted village the first three days of next week. Part of the crowd will attend the celebration at Tygh, others will go to Camp Sherman where a celebration is being put on by the Sherman county summer colony at that place, and many others will use their autos to picnic at many shady nooks along the Columbia highway.

W. F. Jackson relates a rather curious sequence of events consequent to his drive up the Columbia Highway from Portland last Friday. He stopped for gas at Hood River. In driving through town he made a bad traffic turn because of parked cars. When making the turn he heard some one call him, but he thought nothing more about it until he arrived at his brothers home a few blocks distant. Then he discovered he had no gas tank cover and large part of the newly bought gasoline was sloshed out. He called the garage, but they had no cover, nor had they sold him any gas. He could not buy a cover, so improvised a plug. Mr. Jackson spent Friday night with his brother, drove home Saturday, found his tank cover on his front door sill as he started to enter the house. He would like to know who placed it there and how they knew it was his.

We heard Clare Axtell tell a fish story the other day that was all to the good. He said Revella Calbreath, Jeff Wilson and himself early in the season drove to White river for fishing. They fished four miles down the river without any one getting a strike. Disgusted, they put up their gear and started back. Clare saw a nice smooth rock from which to get a drink. He proceeded to get down on his knees and project his mouth towards the water. When his nose was just touching the water a large trout nipped the tip. Not having a fish hook dangling from his rather prominent proboscis he lost the only strike any one of the party had on the trip. The party were heartened to again get their lines in the water, but the discrimination shown by the only trout they saw on the trip continued.

Reports state that the I. O. O. F. picnic held at Locust Grove on the 18th was the one big success of the season from every standpoint. There were a number of sport events for which small prizes were given the winners. Moro lodge lent hearty cooperation to the Wasco lodge in putting over the picnic. The Rebecca auxiliaries of both lodges furnished a sumptuous spread that was unrivaled in the history of good feeds in Sherman county.

The main entertainment of the day was the ball game between the Moro and Wasco lodges. Douma brothers were the organizers of the Moro team. The team made a very creditable showing until G. Douma met with an accident. Douma was at the bat and twisted too quickly as he swung for the ball with the result of having his left knee painfully injured. This eliminated him from the game, which was won by Wasco, score 28 to 10.

The amount collected at the Grass Valley Sunday School rally afternoon meeting was printed in the Observer last week as being $4.86 when it should have been printed $14.86. The collection given by each school was kept separate and went to the school giving it.

Notice: Parties wanting Fruit and Ornamental Trees should avail themselves of the opportunity of buying during the next two months in order to have their orders in on time and thus secure first pick. See A. M. Young, agent for the Yakima & Columbia River Nursery Co., Moro, at once.

Ginn, Coleman & Co. received a car load of McCormick combine machines this week, the first of seven new machines ordered for this section of Sherman county for the 1922 crop harvest. Chas. Bullard, W. C. Miller and Theodore Johnston each receive a machine from the first car load. They are the standard nine foot cut.

Roy Powell has engaged Contractor O. A. Ramsey to build a new barn 54x60 feet on his farm to replace the one burned last week. The fire started at 1 a. m. when Fred Downing went to the barn to quiet some horses that were fighting. A mule kicked at him, hooked the lastern ball on his hoof and swung it like a brake-man trying to stop a runaway freight train.

Lots of fellows would get along better if their wives didn't have such extravagant husbands.

A Moro man says the old-fashioned guy who carried a horseshoe for good luck now carries a spare tire.

French modistes say that skirts will be tighter this fall. Well, then, they will have to build thinner ladies.

We are not in favor of a new law prohibiting cigarette smoking; there is entirely too much of it being done now.

Some of those European countries that have been wooing the dove without success would do well to get on the trail of the stork for a while.

The butcher man, he has a job. That's really more like play; He merely stands about the block And cuts up all the day.

If you want to make a fortune at one throw, just begin the cultivation of fig trees. Indications point to a tremendous demand for the leaves in the near future.

How tempus fugit beats us all. Time passes in a twinkling. For now has come our summer job, And daily lawns we sprinkle.

There will be no formal Fourth of July celebration in Moro this year. In view of this let everybody observe the season and consider the meaning of the day by attending the Presbyterian church next Sunday evening at 8:00. Mr. Hanson, will speak on the much used and much abused theme, "One Hundred Percent Americans."

Herb Ellsworth, popular clerk at the Conlee Grocery, injured the bones of his right foot last Sunday near Shearer. He was one of a party of six out for a good time and some fish. At the time of the accident Herb was alone, working up stream, skipping blithely from rock to rock. One skip missed and his foot went between two rocks. Report says that he had to crawl a mile to the car after he got his foot loose. After his arrival at the camp he was well taken care of and is now on the speedway to complete recovery.
