OREGON NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST

Principal Events of the Week Briefly Sketched for Information of Our Readers.

The Halsey State bank is installing a burglar alarm system. James M. Keyton, 86, veteran of the Civil war, died at La Grande.

Blueback salmon are entering the Columbia river in large numbers. Construction of new buildings in the burned area of Prineville is well under way.

The "Royal Anne" cherry crop around Canby will be somewhat short this season. Operation of La Pine's second saw mill, now under construction, will be started soon.

Peach growers in the Silverton community report that crops will be abundant this year. The date for the second annual Newberg berry festival has been set for Saturday, July 8.

For the first time in many years three cuttings of hay will be put up in Deschutes county this year. Bend was chosen as the next place of meeting by the Oregon Fire Chiefs association in session at Marshfield.

The state highway commission started from Portland July 5 on a circuit of the road system of the entire state. Because he changed a license plate from a Dodge to a Marmon car, S. C. Rogers was arrested at Bend and fined $30.

Former Salemites, now residents of Portland, gathered in Laurelhurst park in Portland, Saturday for annual reunion and picnic. Walter Hall of Princeton, Or., has been appointed to the United States military academy at West Point by Senator Stanford.

Mrs. Connelly, an elderly resident of Bridge Island, was knocked into the Snake river near Nyssa by a passenger train and drowned. S. C. Beeds, assistant postmaster at Bend, Or., has been appointed acting postmaster, succeeding C. B. Hudson, who has moved from the state.

Resolutions opposing the divorce of the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific railroads have been adopted by the Salem Commercial club. Approximately 200 former residents of Brownsville gathered at Laurelhurst park, Portland, Oregon, for an annual reunion one evening last week.

Mrs. E. B. Kingman, wife of the president of the Alesia River Lumber company of Eugene, died at Modesto, Cal., where she had gone in search of health. Fred R. Mettles, active in Baker business and mining circles for the past 30 years, was found dead on the floor in the office of the Oregon-Idaho investment company.

A general advance of 1 cent in milk prices has been announced by Portland distributors. The increase is due directly to the increased cost of production, the dealers say. Stephen A. Lowell, speaker lawyer of Pendleton, was a speaker at the Old Oregon Trail pageant in Baker on the Fourth of July, together with Governor Ben Olcott and Ezra Meeker.

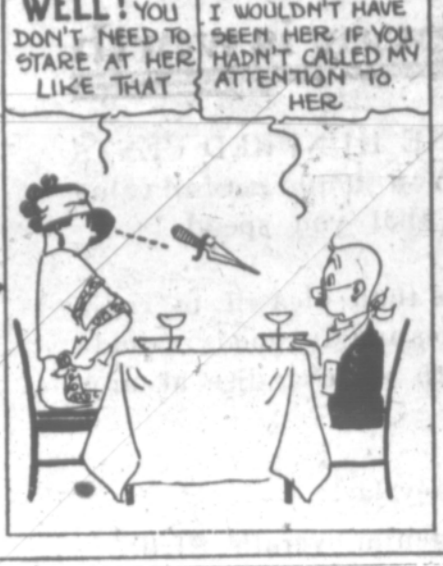

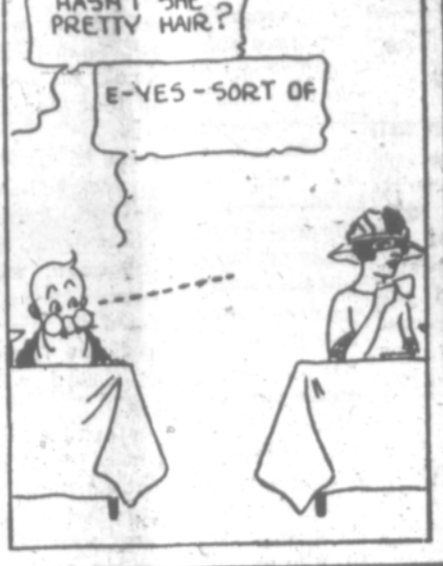

Beymour Jones, Marion county rancher and at one time speaker of the house of representatives, denies the report that he might be a candidate for governor on the Tax Reduction league ticket. Construction work on a large scale has been launched by the Phoenix Utility company, now engaged on a new $1,250,000 power plant on Hood river for the Pacific Power & Light company.

Professor E. R. Fochler of Columbia Falls, Mont., has been selected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of R. W. McNeal, professor of chemistry and athletic supervisor at Albany college. Henry A. Schnorenberg, a young farmer south of Eugene, played the hero when he saved the lives of two men overcome with the fumes from a dynamite blast in the bottom of a well they were digging.

An $8000 bond issue to aid in the financing of the school construction program in La Pine was voted by the La Pine district in the annual school election. The school building was recently destroyed by fire. The Willamette Valley Lumbermen's association has gone on record as opposed to the dissolution of the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific lines. The organization included manufacturers of western Oregon.

Dark Steadman, a rancher and cattlemen of Sumpter valley in Baker county, reports the loss of four cows killed from eating mash that had been dumped out when officers destroyed stiffs discovered in the valley. Organization of a motor corps by the Oregon state motor association, to entertain large groups of visitors to Portland from time to time, is requested in a letter sent to A. H. Lee, president of that organization, by Margaret Baker.

The Black-Haired Girl in Red

By LAURA MONTGOMERY

In past years when Irene had finished a picture she had used to rush downstairs and face her family eagerly, but as she grew older she had learned to dread the laughter that sometimes greeted her. Irene loved color. Flaming tints, bizarre arrangements of color combinations that no one else had dared, fascinated her.

Richard danced four times with the black-haired girl in red, and Daisy teased her gaily as they drove home in the moonlight. "Guess I made a mistake coaxing you to go to the dance," she said. "Fancy dancing four times with that wonderful Richard Grieg."

The change from the paint-laden air of the summer, flower-scented breeze and the recreation of the successful evening did Irene worlds of good. Moreover, her ideas had freshened and she went to work with a steady hand. As she sketched in the outlines for a new cover her lips curved happily. After all, it was a pleasant thing to be a girl and wear pretty clothes.

She worked steadily until noon and then went for a walk before luncheon. At three o'clock she had finished her sketch, which she had done in water-colors to get the first effect. A week later she was waiting in the hall for Daisy, who was trying the effect of a new hat that Irene had, with her new interest in clothes, designed for her sister, when the postman rang.

Irene sat reading the short note from the art editor, her eyes round with surprise. "He says, Daisy, at this sketch is the first thing that I've seen in this had any promise, and that if I keep on doing everyday sketches I may send him something he can accept." Daisy giggled: "Art is very nice; you sure designed a peachy hat for me, sis, but if I had a chance at a map like Richard Grieg, who," she had caught a glimpse of a gray overcoat outside the hall door. "Is coming out this very minute, I'd never waste a second on art."

"The art editor showed me a girl I had never known before," teased Richard later when he had read the wonderful letter from the art editor, "and the sketch of the vivid red gown with the daring blue feather fan evidently made a hit. I don't know, however, that I can spare any of my wife's time for art, though," he added with the masterful air that Irene adored.

Mysteries of the Infinite. What do the stars above us mean? What's around them? What is their purpose in creation? Our "star," which we call the sun, we fondly believe is for the purpose of giving our little grain we call the earth, warmth and light, so that we may live and move and have our being. As we strut about and enjoy our petty achievements we do not often contemplate the starry vault above us. Perhaps it is just as well so, for when we search out the knowledge of the heavens how we shrink! How we shrink! Chicago Journal of Commerce.

Keep Cool Dry. If coal is kept in a dry, airy place it will burn much better than if placed in a close, poorly ventilated cellar. Coal that is excluded from the air soon gets rid of its gas and the absence of this renders it more wasteful when burned.

British Army "Swagger." It has been said that the English army authorities once issued an order that officers should not wear eyeglasses or spectacles, these being considered evidence of defective sight. A number of army officers then took to wearing the monocle, disobeying the army order by a safe margin and giving to themselves, as it was thought at the time, an air of distinction, the thought being something like that which prompted so many officers and enlisted men to carry a short cane which came to be called a "swagger stick."

MOVES ALTOGETHER TOO FAST

Writer Makes Complaint About Life That Will Be Echoed by Many No Longer Young.

Here is another new one already started and even on the second day we seem to feel the finish just ahead of us. F. H. Young writes in Providence Journal. We shall have just time to save up for the summer vacation and then for another period of scripping preparation for Christmas and first thing we know they will be handing around the 1923 calendars. That is really the most alarming aspect of life, after one gets to be about 30 old. It is the infernal and relentless speed of the passing years which steadily becomes speedier. It is only youth that is able to worry about love-measuring machines, the erratic conduct of the equator and the north pole, the speed of the moon and the speed of turtles and all these contemporaneous scientific matters.

And yet, science is just wonderful, isn't it? In Toronto the American Association for the Advancement of Science has just received a report from a professor at the University of Wisconsin which reveals a new speed record. The champion racing turtle in an event which included 163 entrants finished the mile in three years eleven months and nineteen days. All we can get out of this is the thought that we would like to have life move as slowly as it does for a turtle.

Among Immortal Writers. The year 1921 was so taken up by interest in the Dante sixcentenary that most persons failed entirely to note the fact that the year was the four hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the death of another of the world's immortals, Thomas a Kempis, the author of the "Imitation of Christ."

A quarter of a century or so ago a discussion with regard to the world's greatest books was precipitated by an ingenious London editor who asked the question: "If you were to be marooned on a desert island for life and could take only a dozen books with you, what books would you select?" In the lists of answers Dante and a Kempis invariably occurred, in fact a Kempis was omitted from almost none of the lists of university men, and was included by many scientists, even Huxley himself selecting it.

Kipling Was Right

A New Jersey householder, set upon by bandits, lifted up his voice in a wild wail for his wife. The wife appeared, a frying pan in one hand and a rolling pin in the other. The bandits caught sight of her and incontinently fled. Thus is Mr. Kipling's observation of the relative deadliness of the sexes fully vindicated. A woman scorned is, we are told by still another poet, beyond all the furies to be found in a vicinity abounding in furies. But a woman defending her husband's pay envelope is still more to be feared. -New York Tribune.
