EACH TO HIS OWN LIFE

A farmer sold his place and bought in another county, because his neighbors were so mean. With his family and his furniture and his cattle on the road, he stopped at a spring near where a fellow lived who should have been teaching philosophy but who, on account of lack of education, had missed his calling. The farmer told the philosopher how mean his neighbors were and that he hoped he would never see them again. The old philosopher said, "They are just as bad or worse where you are going." And they were.

Soon after that another farmer, who was moving, stopped and told the old philosopher that the only reason he was moving was to get near a better school and that it nearly broke his heart to leave his neighbors. The old philosopher said, "You will find them just as good as and kind where you are going." And he did.

You have perhaps heard of the fellow who died in the prime of his life of spite which had backed up and soured his system. A neighbor of his, an old fellow who could generally say something kind about him, said: "He was not as mean all the time as he was sometimes."

There is no doubt about the fact that many a man actually suffers and dies from rheumatism, from heart trouble, from liver complaint, brought on by the poison of hate in his system. He just can't forget and does not forget those who have opposed him.—East Oregonian.

EFFECT OF DEFORESTATION

Depopulation follows deforestation and this depopulation is particularly noticeable in parts of the south and in the lake states, according to the American Forestry association of Washington. Dr. Herman von Schrenk of St. Louis, after the dwindling population of the Ozark mountains following the destruction and burning of their forests as an example of the far reaching economic effects of deforestation. Prof. F. B. Roth of the University of Michigan tells of the diminishing population of many counties in Michigan where rural industries have disappeared with the devastation of their forests. Urging upon congress the importance of scientific investigations in determining the quickest, cheapest and best methods of growing timber and reforesting idle forest lands, the association has endorsed the plan of establishing forest experiment stations in the chief forest regions of the United States.

The average farm family has to feed three city families, in addition to itself. This is figured out by census experts, who find that of the nation's 41,614,268 workers, only 10,968,158 are engaged in agriculture, forestry and animal husbandry. A near-sighted farmer is apt to look on the city people as parasites. To a certain extent, they may be. But, without city folks, the farmer would have no market for his surplus crops. He would plow with a sharp stick instead of the city-made steel plow. His furniture, rugs, clothing, suits, wire fencing, wireless and other devices come from the city. It is a fair exchange between city and country, except when farm and garden prices are out of balance, as often is the case.

We should be reluctant to admit that Argentina grows corn superior to ours, but the French and Belgians like it better, importing it from that source by preference, notwithstanding the fact that they have to pay a considerably higher price for it. In France and Belgium corn finds little favor as human food, but is used for stock to a large extent, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Argentine corn is preferred because the grain is smaller and, therefore, better adapted for poultry feed than American corn, which must be cracked. It is claimed that the Argentine corn is sweeter, and on that account preferable for horses; and furthermore, that it keeps longer because it contains three to four per cent less moisture.

And we fancy that a good many people who are tearing their shirts about other people's children would hit the bullseye every time if they should give a little more attention to their own children.

The agreement between Russia and Germany to cancel their war claims against each other is perfectly natural. What would be the use of trading carloads of worthless rubles for carloads of worthless marks?

Marconi says that it is now possible to flash radio around the world. Guglielmo's next invention will be a compact little apparatus to tell us whether we have caught the sound while coming or going.

About the passing of the old family doctor, it may be that the family no longer can afford to have him and it may be that he no longer can afford to have the family.

HARRY CAREY'S ARGUMENT FAVORS EVERYDAY CLOTHES

Strangling Collars and Pinching Shoes Never Worn by Western Star

"How come they turn 'em out like floor-walkers?" asked Harry Carey as he watched a fashionable wedding cortege wind its way solemnly out of a church.

"Look at the brand-new husband," he whispered. "He has modestly shielded his Adam's apple with a collar that would constitute death by strangulation in the mind of any unbiased coroner, his toes are overlapping in those blinding shoes and his ears look like they were going to give way under the weight of that two-quart hat."

"Why can't folks get married, be buried and in other ways enjoy themselves in regular clothes?"

"Give a man a flannel shirt, open at the gullet, flapping britches, a pair of broad-toed shoes and a floppy old hat that doesn't depend upon the rigidity of his ears for support, and he is more competent to decide whether or not he will love, honor and cherish the woman who will, in all probability, live to hear her pastor say 'ashes to ashes and dust to dust' over his immaculately groomed frame."

In his Universal photodrama Harry Carey dresses exactly as he does on his own ranch. If an enthusiastic populace should send him to the White House he would cruise down Pennsylvania avenue in his own roaring road yacht, the snappiest thing on wheels, but his costume would consist of a suit that looked as tho he had bought it before the days of prohibition, his famous sombrero and boots.

The big, grinning Western star has just completed a picture that suits him to perfection; in fact, he wrote it. It is called "The Fox," and is a story of a regular fellow who does under what other he-man would do under the circumstances.

Robert Thornby directed it, mostly in the middle of the Mojave desert. It is said to be the first super-western picture ever made. It is coming to the Moro Theatre Tuesday, September 26th.

$5000 in Furs Displayed in The Dalles

Through the operation under one management of 371 stores in all parts of the United States, the J. C. Penney Co. is in a position to offer to its customers many exceptional opportunities that other institutions cannot afford.

Last week the J. C. Penney Co. store at The Dalles had on display a five thousand dollar showing of fur garments, the price of single articles ranging up to $389. Included in the showing were fur coats, cape collars, chokers, scarfs and stoles in Hudson seal, natural muskrat, jap mink, racoon, jap weasel, French near seal, marmot and coney.

The presentation of these fur garments was made on a schedule laid down by the head offices of the company and allowed them to be on display for short periods only. Orders were taken from customers and made up as wanted. Delivery will be made at a later date.

Advance showings of late merchandise are coming to The Dalles quite often and customers might benefit themselves by asking about them when in The Dalles.

The extension of the electric railway system on the west side from Corvallis to Eugene, aside from the completion of the Natron extension are among the early projects of the Southern Pacific company, when the present litigation is disposed of and the former plans of the company are allowed to materialize, said William Sproule, president, while in Eugene last week.

There were four fatalities due to industrial accidents in Oregon during the week ending September 7, according to a report prepared by the state industrial accident commission. The victims were Alfred Moullet, logger, Salem; H. Oberle, machinist, Portland; Herbert O. Byrnes, laborer, Portland; and Marion Waddell, laborer, Oakland. A total of 522 accidents were reported during the week.

The secretary of state has received from the department of agriculture at Washington a check for $110,015.21, which will be prorated among the various counties of Oregon, based on the acreage of national forests. This money was received by the government from rentals and sales of national forests. The money is used by the counties for the maintenance of public roads and schools.

O. L. McIntyre of Fulton, Mo., and W. E. Taylor of Boulder, Mont., have filed applications with the state board of control to succeed E. S. Tillinghast as superintendent of the Oregon State School for the Deaf. In order to have sufficient time in which to consider filling the place made vacant by Mr. Tillinghast's resignation, the board has deferred opening of the deaf school this year from September 26 to October 2.

Options on several thousand privately-owned acres of the best timber in Grant county situated in the Bear valley section about 27 miles from Canyon City have been obtained by a middle eastern lumber concern, and it is reported this company has deposited in a Portland bank sufficient funds to cover the purchase price of the $90,000,000 feet, board measure, of timber, which will shortly be placed on the market by the service. Bend, it is believed, will be the location chosen for a large mill with a railroad extending into the belt.

Carpenter Arranging Exhibit at Fair

County Agent W. S. Carpenter left Wednesday via auto for Salem, accompanied by Matt Simons of Kent. The main exhibits from Sherman county will be at the state fair grounds by the time of their arrival and the remainder of the week will be used in putting the Sherman county booth in order.

L. B. Payne, of the Fleck orchards at Rufus, left Thursday with his big auto truck loaded with an assortment of grapes, peaches, water melons, cantaloupes and miscellaneous vegetables to be added to the Sherman county exhibit. Included in the exhibit in charge of Mr. Payne was a branch of a grape vine a rod long, which will be used as an archway opening to the fruit and vegetable display.

Treasury Certificate Price Raises

Prospective investors in treasury certificates are advised that on October 1st the government will increase the selling rate for these certificates, thereby decreasing the rate of interest now paid by the government. At the present time twenty-five dollar certificates sell for twenty dollars. After October 1st the price will be twenty dollars and fifty cents. One hundred dollar certificates now sell for eighty dollars; the new price will be eighty-two dollars. One thousand dollar certificates now sell for eight hundred dollars. The new price is eight hundred twenty dollars.

CHINESE GAMBLING HOUSE BACKGROUND FOR PICTURE

Betty Comp on Plays Role of Lure For Father in Oriental Drama

One of the most unusual roles ever seen in a motion picture is that portrayed by Betty Compson in her first starring vehicle, "At the End of the World," which will be seen at the Moro Theatre next Saturday.

Miss Compson is seen as "Cherry," the beautiful daughter of a broken-down Englishman who runs a cafe and gambling palace in Shanghai, China. She grows up in the atmosphere of the gay resort, serving as a lure for her father's establishment, yet taking perfect care of herself and possessing fine qualities that are still dormant. Then comes romance, and into this romance breaks the emotions of the lives of other men who are made desperate by her charms. The role is a severe test of the emotional powers of any actress, and Miss Compson is said to have executed it with the same skill and in the same convincing manner in which she portrayed her exacting part in George Loane Tucker's "The Miracle Man."

Penrhyn Stanlaw directed the new picture, which is an adaptation of the play by Ernest Klein, scenario by Ed-ward Bingham. Milton Sills, Mitchell Lewis, Casson Ferguson, Spottiswoode Aitken, Joseph Kilgour and other famous players appear in support of the star.

In addition to the feature picture, there will be shown Saturday Mack Sennett's "Are Waitresses Safe?" This is said to be one of the best comedies appearing in Moro for some time. Sennett is acknowledged to be among those in the top ranks of motion picture comedy producers, and his latest releases go to prove that he is living up to his reputation.

Prominent educators consider that a knowledge of business integrity, gained thru reading advertisements, is an essential part of a serviceable education.

Mrs. Clara McTaggart of Eugene has just received notification that she had been named as one of a board of 12 members who will act as a national committee of censors of moving picture films. She will leave November 15 for New York city to assume her duties.

Production from the 123 mills of the northwest reporting to the West Coast Lumbermen's association for the week ending September 6 was 2 per cent above normal and new business was 2 per cent below production, according to a report issued. Shipments were 14 per cent above new business.

A caravan of 20 Klamath Falls automobiles visited Merrill, 30 miles from Klamath Falls, and was greeted by more than 200 Merrill citizens, who served their guests with a dinner. The purpose of the caravan was to promote greater understanding and friendship between the two communities. Oregon pensions recently granted include Mary J. Stockwell, Marquam, $30; Florence A. B. Judging teams of the boys' and girls' industrial clubs in the various counties of Oregon have been instructed to report in Salem Monday morning, September 25, to participate in the state fair, according to a letter mailed by the state superintendent of public instruction to all county superintendents.

Re-Organized Dorcas Society Elects

The first business meeting of the Dorcas society study club was held Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. George Hemmgin, at which time a new constitution and by-laws were adopted, and officers were elected. Mrs. T. C. Lee was elected president; Mrs. W. B. Johnston, vice president; Mrs. J. C. Harper, secretary and treasurer.

Under the re-organization plan just completed, the Dorcas society will discontinue its work-day meetings and substitute instead a literary study plan. The next meeting will be held next Wednesday at Mrs. O. L. Belshoe's. Present day magazines, their authors and artists will be discussed.

It is a well established belief among those who invest in Observer advertising that their money does in that way realize a double value.
