All Around Our Neighborhood

There's more than one way to handle these youngsters

IT'S no easy job trying to bring up young daughters these days. Mrs. Burns ought to know—she has three of them. And last summer she worried dreadfully—all the young people going on long auto rides after night. So this spring she rummaged around in the garret and barn and unearthed some old chairs and a table or two and a porch swing they hadn't had up for years. Then she got some Acme Quality Enamel-Kote and copied some painted furniture she had seen in town—the prettiest pale green with decorations in lavender and pink and blue—and made a lot of crocheted cushions. Then she painted some old porch boxes and filled them with ferns from the woods and bought some new records for the phonograph. I wish you could see all the boys flock down there now. It begins to look as if she wouldn't be able to keep the girls at home after all—they say Gertrude is engaged already.

ACME QUALITY ENAMEL-KOTE

All the neighborhood buys its Acme Quality Paint, Enamel, Stains and Varnishes in one place. If you want to take everyone else by lightning on the home in the neighborhood, we can tell you just how to do about it. What Acme Enamel-Kote is, and how to use them. Come to our store.

Picture Show News
For The Current Week

Charles Ray's dramatic triumph, "Dynamite Smith," is a gripping, thrilling and picturesque story of a timid young man who, on his first adventure in the world of men, encounters tragedy, love, vengeance, hate, fear and courage beyond his wildest dreams. Those who remember Ray's famous characterizations of the bashful boy, will rejoice in "Dynamite Smith." Those who have never seen him in such will find Charles Ray at his superlative best. It is a part that brings out all the charm in his personality and the strength and depth of his talent.

Ruth Dwyer, one of filmdom's popular beauties, who played opposite Herbert Rawlinson in three of his best pictures, is the girl, and Hayden Stevenson, who played his manager in "The Leather Pushers," William Austin, and others who appear in its swift action are: John Steppling, Tom McGuire, Fred Malatesta, Frank Leigh, May Wallace and William Austin.
