Walter J. Robinson, manager of the Washington wheat growers' association estimates that the price will go from $1.50 to panic figures, due to the short crops in wheat belts outside of the intermountain and Pacific northwest states. Several farmers in eastern Washington recently sold wheat at $1.35 in the field. This, they say, is equal to $1.50 on the platform. If the farmer is situated so he can do so it is up to him to decide whether he will sell or hold, but it is dangerous business for the farmer to listen too intently to the wheat price boost. It is well to remember what happened to many Sherman county farmers about five years ago.

A news dispatch from Salem states that returns from seed wheat loans are being received from eastern Oregon farmers at the rate of approximately $5000 a day, by the state board of control. Approximately $60,000 of a total of $400,000 loaned had been received up until midnight of August 9th. Loans were made by the state to farmers under an act of the last legislature appropriating $2,500,000. Banks to which the mortgages and notes were sent for collection have reported that practically all the money loaned will be returned to the state this fall with interest. The notes are due as soon as the crops are sold.

Private Owner Idea Gains Favor in Europe

For centuries, Europe has been the home of art, literature, learning, science, invention and the luxuries of life. But the masses could not generally share these luxuries with wealthy or officially prominent people. It remained for the United States in a short 150 years to give the telephone, electricity, the automobile, pianos, phonographs, modern railroad transportation, insurance, household gas appliances, the camera, and numerous other conveniences many of which even today are luxuries in Europe, to the poorest citizen in this country as part of his daily life.

The result of America's high standard of living, developed under a system of private initiative and enterprise, is now being felt in Europe. The chamber of commerce of Paris and the French chambers of commerce, at which 140 chambers were represented, have adopted resolutions urging the French government to transfer the government owned telephone service of France to private enterprise. Press reports declare that this movement in favor of private ownership has found support among trade associations throughout France.

In 1924, Greece granted to a British syndicate a 65-year concession for the installation and operation of a modern telephone service throughout the country. Spain has lately adopted a similar policy. The Italian authorities have arranged for a sale to private companies of government owned local telephone systems of Italy. Poland turned over her telephones to a private company. Germany has re-organized her telephones virtually on a basis of private enterprise. This is the drift of European sentiment today.

And why shouldn't the European countries follow the lead of the United States? The telephone is for the wealthy in Europe; it is for everybody in this country—16,000,000 telephones in a nation of 110,000,000 people.

Not only in their dealings with their own employees, but notably in their relations with the public, government owned utilities have frequently failed to attain the standard set by enterprises under private ownership and operation.

Our telephone industry, owned by over half a million citizens, stands typically American and represents the spirit of initiative and enterprise, which has enabled this nation to surpass all others in its standard of living, conveniences, and even luxuries in the average home.

The plan of consolidating 180,000 miles of interstate highways into national roads will be submitted for approval of the various states within a week, it was indicated today. Subcommittees of the joint board of interstate highways are working out details for the plan in conjunction with the United States bureau of public roads. The board has designated 40 main routes and the sub-committees are working out details to be submitted to the states. No additional funds, other than the designated $80,000,000 now in the treasury, will be available for the work and none will be asked by the states.

Clean-up and Paint-up is Moral Civic Duty

Cleanliness, it has been said, is next to Godliness. A dirty individual is neither clean spiritually nor mentally. Dirt makes for ruin physically, mentally, morally. This is as true of a town as an individual. The dirty town, the town full of rubbish, of untidy houses, of muddy streets, of unsanitary conditions, is non-progressive materially, morally and educationally. Neither moral nor material advancement flourish in dirty, unkept dwellings or in unkept towns.

If any town or city is ambitious for advancement, or if even a few of its men and women are ready to devote their time and energy to the betterment of the community, the surest way to achieve success is to clean up—make back yards and front yards clean, make streets clean and keep them clean, encourage the people to beautify their home and their yards, stimulate a love for and a pride in their homes and in their towns, repair the tumble-down yard fences, paint up, make things as clean outside as they should be inside and then that community will look up mentally, morally and materially.

No community which does not clean up and paint up, which does not do its best to have clean yards, and clean streets, has any right to look up and face the world.

It might be said a dirty town makes a dirty people; a dirty people makes moral and material dirt and decay. It is the duty of all men and women to make their homes and their home towns just as clean and attractive and beautiful as possible. He who falls short in this respect falls short of his duty to God and man, it matters not what else he may do.
