When we read of moves to dissolve parliament in Europe, we almost regret that the system which makes it possible was not adopted by the framers of our own Constitution.
This is the time of the year the college seniors worry over how much money bricklayers are making.
The campaign-song poets should be given an office—if that would hush them.
New fly swatters have a felt binding at the edge. It protects the furniture and lessens the danger of distributing the fly.
Harvard announces a device to dispel fog. It ought to get a real test in a campaign year.
Officially, the safety drive is over. Unofficially, it should continue.

A number of women have been made soviet generals. Oh, well! They should be used to the smell of powder.
This will probably be remembered in history as the season when women's stockings came in such ugly colors.
"Walk for your complexion," a woman's page advises. It becomes necessary when the drug store won't deliver it.
One of the saddest sights of nature is a Smart Aleck of eighteen trying to give the impression that he is a hard-boiled egg.
Washington reports a drop in living costs, but says nothing about the possibility of any slump in vacation expenditures.
The insanity pleas offered in modern murder cases constitute a dreadful libel against the occupants of the insane asylums.
