LIQUOR PLANT FOUND ON MILLERS ISLAND

Sheriff Hugh Chrisman and Harry Kunsman returned to Moro late Sunday evening with a copper wash boiler still and coils found that afternoon on Miller Island, in the Columbia river near the mouth of the Deschutes river.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, living at Millers, accompanied by Mrs. Thompson's sister, went to the island, which lies directly opposite the mouth of Fulton canyon, on a hunt for Indian arrow heads. During their rambles they came upon the still, which was all primed for use but had not yet operated at that location.

Upon their return to the main land they notified Sheriff Chrisman of their find by phone, with the result is stated.

Shortly before the still was found the three arrow head hunters had noticed a man, sitting motionless on a horse, on the bluff overlooking the river. When the still was discovered, apparently, when the man on the horse saw that it was discovered, he was seen to put spurs to the horse and ride rapidly away. It was thought that this man had acted as a sentinel for those who were operating the still and that none of these people would make chances on visiting the island if any suspicion was felt that their presence was known.

Picture Show News
For The Current Week

With the completion of three reels, comprising 3,000 feet of scenic, sporting and recreational motion picture film, the Oregon state motor association has launched a program of spreading the gospel of Oregon's advantages to the tourist and vacationist as well as the prospective investor. These films will be added to as suitable subjects are filmed. It is the intention of the association to cover the Pacific northwest in the filming of subjects suitable to their purpose, and to distribute the films to logical points where tourists and visitors may be induced to visit Oregon and the Pacific northwest in their touring, vacationing or traveling activities.

A shining example of cinema fortune's favorite is Marion Davies, star of many super productions, the latest of which is "Lights of Old Broadway," with Conrad Nagel in the leading role and Charles McHugh, Eleanor Lawton, Frank Currier, Julia Swayne Gordon, Mathew Betz, Wilbur Higby and George K. Arthur in the supporting cast. The most thrilling motion pictures ever filmed for motion pictures are contained in "Lights of Old Broadway." The scenes are said even to be more exciting than the famous Russian riot scenes which were filmed in Moscow some years ago and suppressed when brought to this country.

"DON Q." FAIRBANKS' GREAT-EST STUNT FILM

Douglas Fairbanks has never before produced a picture which offered him the latitude and scope of expression that is given in his new United Artists Corporation vehicle, "Don Q. Son of Zorro," scheduled for its initial showing at the Auditorium theatre, The Dalles, February 26-7-8.

To begin with this picture is replete with all the romantic dash and go of earlier productions, coupled with an unusual opportunity for histrionic work, due not only to the highly melodramatic nature of the story, but also to the fact that the star is called upon to carry a difficult dual role—difficult because he depicts youth as well as age. He will be seen as Zorro, a sedate Zorro, mellow and philosophical with the passing of years but a fighter for all of that, his grim determination spelling indomitable courage. As the son, Don Q, he will reflect the dashing, devil-may-care spirit which made his Zorro interpretation famous.

Added to the opportunities for excellent acting are the hair-raising stunts which have always kept Fairbanks fans in a flutter between their seats and the ceiling, theoretically speaking. Doug performs feats in this picture that will seem incredible.
