OLYMPIC GAMES OF ANCIENT GREECE AND ROME

Every boy has heard of the great Olympic games of our own time, and can remember when the last of these wonderful events was held at Paris in 1924. At the Paris games, representative athletes from practically every civilized nation competed for honors and the contests, while they took place, were the talk of the world.

But not everyone knows that these modern Olympic games had their counterparts in the ancient world, particularly in Greece. Indeed, to the Greeks of old goes all credit for originating great public exhibitions in which athletes strove to establish and break world's records.

The Olympic games of ancient times were held in a district of south central Greece, known as the Olympian plain. Here was located a splendid group of buildings in which the most beautiful art treasures of Greece were housed. There was a large temple in which statues were placed, both of the Greek Gods and of the victors in the contests.

But most important of all was a huge structure somewhat resembling our modern stadiums. In this great arena were staged the contests which drew participants and spectators from all parts of the Mediterranean world that were under Greek influence. Unlike our modern stadiums which are built chiefly for football games, this arena was extremely long in proportion to its width for the event in which the ancient Greeks were mostly interested was the foot race.

The Greeks excelled at running, both in the dashes and in long distance work. Indeed, our term "marathon" which applies to a long, tiring race, first originated in 490 B. C. when an Athenian messenger ran the twenty miles from Marathon to Athens to tell of the victory over the Persians, only to fall dead of exhaustion. Besides foot-races, in which some wonderful records were made, wrestling matches, discus throwing, the shot put and broad jump also met with much favor. For some reason the Greeks thought boxing degrading and did not indulge in this sport. To these sports was added the chariot race when Greece was overrun and conquered by the Romans.

Besides awarding prizes for excellence in physical sport, the Greeks also gave away honors to poets, painters, musicians and sculptors, whose work was made public at these great events. At first the games were limited to persons of Greek blood, but after the conquest by the Romans, seekers of the laurel wreath came to Olympia from all over the ancient world.

In the year 396 A. D. a foolish law abolished the Olympic games and they were not revived until 1896, when, exactly 1600 years after they had been done away with, they were revived at Athens. Since then they have been held every four years, (except during the World War), at different places in Europe and the United States, and will take place in Holland in 1928.

A GREAT INVENTION THAT HAS CHANGED THE WORLD

Since the discovery of how to make fire, nothing has so greatly influenced the life of mankind as the printing press. Without the art of printing we would have neither books nor newspapers, learning would be limited to a very few, and men would be in the same state of ignorance and fear as they were many hundreds of years ago.

Accounts differ as to who was the actual inventor of this wonderful machine; we know, however, that sometime in the early part of the fifteenth century, probably about 1440, a man by the name of Gutenberg was operating a press in Mainz, Germany. This press was a small, crude affair, capable of printing one page at a time of smudgy, rude characters. It bore not even the faintest resemblance to the huge, wonderful presses of today that you can see in any big newspaper office.

For a long time after the invention of printing had made it possible to produce many books at one time and to sell them at a price that even the poor peasants could afford to pay, printing was a forbidden art. This resulted from the attempts of the church officials to keep the common people in ignorance in order that the clergy might be able to tax them heavily.

In England during the sixteenth century there were severe laws prohibiting the printing of any books whatsoever. Any one found with a printed Bible in his possession could be burned at the stake. By 1694, however, all the unjust laws had been repealed, and from that time on printing became generally practiced throughout the civilized world.

During the last hundred years very great strides have been made. Today there are printing presses which can print, fold, cut and stack 60,000 newspapers in one hour. No family is too poor to afford books, and whereas, four hundred years ago, only the wealthiest could buy an education, rare indeed is the man or woman today who cannot read or write.

Another thing that makes the motorist pity the cow is that she has two horns and can't blow 'em.

Picture Show News For The Current Week

History is full of the cases where men and women have paid great prices for pleasure. However, "The Price of Pleasure," Universal-Jewel, co-starring Virginia Valli and Norman Kerry is not based on anything from the written history of any great person. It is a picture taken from the lives of people in the walks of life that are familiar to all. In the case of "The Price of Pleasure," that which is paid is heartache and despair—that which is paid for is a mad love and the luxury and gaiety that a maid craves, even though she knows full well that it is far beyond her realization in the ordinary course of things.

"Reckless Romance," Al Christie's feature farce, is said to be one of the most entertaining pictures ever filmed. At previews held in Pasadena and Los Angeles, this picture elicited roars of hearty laughter. This hilarious reception occurred even before the picture's final editing and now with Joseph Farnham's clever titles it is declared to be one of the funniest pictures to be shown here in a long time. The cast includes T. Roy Barnes, Harry Myers, Walida Hawley, Sylvia Breamer, Jack Duffy, Tully Marshall and other notables, each of whom is especially suited to his role. Director Scott Sidney's years of experience in the field of comedy tell in the admirable fashion in which he has handled the farce.

THE DALLES LITTLE THEATRE CLUB AT WASCO

A group of talented entertainers residing in The Dalles have organized the Little Theatre Club and under this name have given several excellent entertainments. Their programs have a combined quality of home talent and professional acting that has brought them a large amount of favorable criticism.

Recently the Little Theatre Club put on a play at the Civic Auditorium in The Dalles that topped their previous efforts. This large theatre only had 21 vacant seats when the play began. Dufur likewise greeted them with a full house and at Arlington, where they played last Thursday, all the reserved seats were sold between noon and 6 p. m. of the day they were put on sale.

The Little Theatre Club is a 4-year old organization. It never yet has failed to play to capacity houses. It must please its public to hold such a continuous record for four years. The club will present "Adam and Eva" at Wasco opera house on Wednesday, March 24th, under the auspices of the ladies auxiliary of the American Legion, admission 50 cents.

"Adam and Eva" is the play recently put on at The Dalles, at Dufur and at Arlington.

DINING CAR COOKS USE 67 MEAT VARIETIES

It requires a total of 67 varieties of meat concocted into 115 different dishes to meet the appetite demands of a fastidious traveling public. These and other facts were just revealed by an extensive survey of dining-car services just completed by the national live stock and meat board. The survey embraced 45 leading railroads of the United States and Canada. It was conducted to obtain data relative to consumer's demand for meat and meat products, according to the board statements.

While a recent national study of meat consumption in the home, conducted by the U. S. department of agriculture, showed a preference for beef, the board's survey of dining-cars indicated that the traveler relies more generally on the old stand-by—"ham and—." The figures showed that every one of the forty five roads serve ham. Of the pork items, bacon comes next to ham.

In the beef division, the roast is apparently the most in favor. It is served on 84 per cent of the roads, which is a larger number than for any other beef dish. Sirloin steak is a close second however, being offered by approximately 82 per cent of the roads listed.

As for lamb dishes, chops head the list. Eighty-two per cent of the roads were serving lamb chops. Roast lamb also was quite popular. Fifty-seven per cent of the roads serve it.

That there is a wide variety in meats on the dining cars of the country is indicated by the dishes shown in the board's survey such as ox joints, veal kidneys, calf's brains, rump steak, pig's feet, lamb pie, liver and bacon, frankfurters, head cheese, bologna, and meat loaf.

In commenting on the survey, R. C. Pollock, general manager of the board, pointed out that the board found more meat and meat products served on dining cars than any other one food. "This fact appears to explode the theory of food faddists and vegetarians that the sedentary worker is turning away from meat," said Mr. Pollock. "The only explanation for the large variety of meats served is that the public demands it; and the public which patronizes the diners is largely made up of sedentary workers."

If a public official neglects his duty, he is considered inefficient, and if he does it, then he is accused of truckling for votes.

Some of the hats being thrown into the ring look as if they were out of style several years back.
