Universal Language

A German professor in a Berlin language school, over here on a visit, is quoted as making the rather remarkable admission—for a German—that there is no need to invent for general or universal use a new language, since English already has taken that position. Almost beyond question he is right when he says that already the person who speaks only English can get along fairly well in any part of the world, as everywhere he will find those who can understand him and who can make themselves understood by him, says the New York Times. Once it was French that had, or more or less closely approached, that position, but English almost everywhere has superseded it as the second language of everybody who has a second language.

British railway unions have refused to assist the striking coal miners by holding up transportation of imported coal. This is a definite result of the general strike and of its complete failure. There is no doubt that the railway men sympathize with the miners, says the Philadelphia Ledger. But the general strike demonstrated the futility and unfairness of bringing hardship upon the whole country in the interest of a single group of strikers. Fighting the mine employers is one thing; making war on innocent bystanders is quite another. The general strike constituted British labor's greatest blunder. The effects of it will be felt for years to come. It was costly both in money and morale. Its inevitable failure will force the unions to step lightly in the future. They will even be inclined to flee when no man pursueth.

It is interesting to see, from the dean of Windsor's report on the repairs of St. George's chapel, that the medieval workman sometimes scamped his work, and the medieval architect was not above a little jerry building, says the London Outlook. Somehow one had often suspected it—the picture of the honest joy in toil and trouble drawn by Mr. Chesterton and other medievalists has always seemed to contain more imagination than research. The dean, however, has done the research, and shown that masters and men were every much the same then as now. His proof is not, of course, as exciting as a paradox; but truth sometimes gets a better perspective than fiction in these matters.

The Best Seller

The Bible, in the English language, still continues to be the most widely sold and, it is to be presumed, the most widely read book. Reports of the American Bible society year after year have shown that as many Bibles are sold annually as all other books combined, and perhaps more than that; and in a time when records are being broken in other lines Bible sales do likewise. Latest figures available in connection with Bible sales are reported from the one hundred and twenty-second meeting of the British and Foreign Bible society, held recently in London. These figures show that in 1925 more English Bibles were sold than in any previous twelve-month period, and that the society's output for the year reached the remarkable total of ten and one-half millions. Increases were shown in China, Japan and throughout the Far East. Russia alone declines to admit the Bible as an influence for good.

There is truth in what the vice president of the Jefferson Memorial association says about the famous gig. He claims that "the eight days which young Thomas Jefferson spent along the road in this solitary vehicle were productive of far deeper meditation than perhaps our more modern means of travel would have permitted." But are the slow ways of colonial times a partial explanation of the sound thoughts of early American leaders? Not at all! There were wild and selfish proposals in those days also, says the Baltimore Sun. A man's thoughts depend more on himself than on his mode of travel.

Oregon News in Brief

Petitions for a measure to be put on the fall ballot giving the opportunity to the voters of Tillamook county to vote on a special tax of 1 mill, which will raise $25,000 for further improvements of the county fair grounds, were filed with the county clerk.

With the oiling of the Cello section of the Columbia highway, the oiling of state roads for the season has ended. Approximately 600 miles were treated. The cost of oiling has varied from $500 to $1000 a mile, depending on the quality of oil and the hauling distance.

Attorney-General Van Winkle will be asked to intervene in behalf of the state of Oregon in proceedings to be instituted in the state of Massachusetts against the American Telegraph & Telephone company looking to a reduction of telephone rates, it was announced at the executive department.

Hunters may now transport deer they have killed through Crater Lake national park. Permission has been granted by Superintendent C. G. Thompson, rescinding orders previously given. The carcasses must be out of sight during the time they are in the park boundaries, according to the new order.

Rather than foreclose on approximately 25,000 acres of land owned by the Oregon Land corporation, the Klamath county court accepted $12,000 in lieu of $35,000 owed on delinquent taxes since 1917. The court in its decision held that in the event of foreclosure the county would be burdened with lands which it could not sell.

Fire which was thought to have ignited from a short circuit in the institution garage destroyed the plant of the Mount Angel college at Mount Angel, with a loss estimated at between $750,000 and $1,000,000. This included five buildings, equipment and valuable manuscripts in the college museum and library. The college was conducted by the Benedictine order of Catholic priests.

WILL SPEAK

In Behalf of the Candidacy of

Bert E. Haney for the Senate

October 4th—MONDAY—at Portland City Auditorium at 8 p. m. Tune in Radios on KGW at 8:20 p. m.

Dr. Wonderlick announces the removal of his office into the apartments connected with his residence in the Burres house next to the Wasco News Enterprise. In making this change the convenience of the public as well as of the doctor has been taken into consideration as it will be easier to give office treatments day or night and easier to locate the doctor and no attention need be paid to office hours. Altho under the same roof, the office will afford all desired privacy as there is a separate entrance, waiting room and a consultation room separated from the rest of the house by double walls. The public is welcomed to use the scales as before. The waiting room is always open.

Of course, this story about 25,000 pairs of American women's shoes being unusable in Moscow because the Russian women have such small feet is a mere piece of impertinence, expressive only of resentment because the United States has not recognized the Soviets. It is perfectly well known that American women have the smallest feet of any women in the world where nature is not interfered with, says the Philadelphia Record. In China measures have been taken to prevent the feet from growing, but since the empire was abolished and the Chinese have set up the claim that they are "alike same Melton men" we understand that foot-binding has been abandoned. If Russian women do not buy American shoes it is probably because they cannot get their feet into them.

Men get along fairly well together so long as they don't want the same girl or the same office. When they become crosswise in love or politics, each knows the other is an abandoned scoundrel, an unprincipled liar and a degraded cannibal.

When a politician doesn't know the answer he says he will take the matter under advisement. If a doctor is baffled he puts the patient under observation. If a garage hand doesn't know what's wrong he says it is the generator.
