"AGNES, you haven't dared to ask John Orr to come here!" Agnes turned from her desk with a faint smile, tinged with a bit of regret and looked thoughtfully at the fair, dark-eyed girl who had thrust herself unceremoniously into the room.

He'll probably rush in and grab you right in front of everybody. I'll have you meet him alone. And I've plotted all this—in a way. We've all of us been trying to make you keep thinking of John, what a fine fellow he really is. You aren't angry, are you?"

Woman Refuses Salary; Causes Political Stir

Annapolis, Md.—Mrs. Ethel Lorentz had a job with the city delegation in the general assembly, but she had no work to do. So she turned down her salary. Speaker E. Brooke Lee announced that the $3 a day that Mrs. Lorentz was supposed to get for her work as a clerk or secretary to the city delegation was paid to her by check, but the checks were returned uncashed and there was nothing for him to do about it.

Finds Home-Made Fluid for Treating Anemia

Boston.—A liver extract that will be effective in treating pernicious anemia can be made at home with very little effort, Dr. William B. Castle and Morris A. Bowie of Harvard University Medical school have reported to the American Medical Association.

This will prove a great boon to sufferers from this disease who are unable to afford the high price of the commercial liver extracts or of the more palatable calves' liver. Eating half a pound of beef liver a day soon becomes a tiresome ordeal, yet this has been the only chance for life and health for many of the poor who suffer from pernicious anemia.

The domestic extract is as effective as the commercial ones and may be made in the ordinary kitchen by any reasonably intelligent person, the Harvard scientists declared. Only the usual domestic utensils are needed.

The cost of the beef liver is practically the only cost. The extract is palatable and may be drunk hot or cold, with or without salt. It is said to taste something like beef broth.

The process of making it consists in general of grinding the liver, soaking it in cold water, straining, heating and restraining. The ordinary meat grinder, strainer, enamel pots, glass jars and jelly bags found in most kitchens are the only utensils required. The success of the procedure depends on the care and exactness with which the directions for the various steps in the process are followed. Doctor Castle and Mr. Bowie gave these in detail in their report.

Barber Bars Women; Hamper Men's Trade

Columbus, Ohio.—J. E. Van Heyde, a barber here for the last half century, refuses to allow women to enter his shop. He says women are prone to procrastinate making up their minds what they want and how they want it done, and that men haven't time to wait. But Van Heyde continued: "They do men want to tell a story or two, smoke a cigar or cigarette, and engage in conversation that wouldn't be able to if women were in the shop."

CURACAO GETS TASTE OF OLD PIRATE DAYS

Dutch Island Raided by Band From Mainland

Washington.—In becoming the scene of a surprise attack by a band of looters, Curacao, small Dutch island of the Caribbean, forsook her slow existence as one of the quietest and most peaceful towns of the West Indies, and flashed back to the rollicking, roaring, bloody days of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries, when this "Spanish Main" was a freebooter's paradise. A bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

The chief city of the island Willemstad (also called Curacao), a town of nearly 20,000 inhabitants, was attacked during the night of June 8. A band of 500 men from the South American mainland; the forts and police headquarters were seized; a supply of arms and ammunition was stolen; an American ship was commandeered; and the adventurers set sail for Venezuela with Curacao's governor and his chief of police as hostages.

"As astounding as this exploit appears to the twentieth century observer," continues the bulletin, "it is only a repetition, with slight variations, of experiences from the island's past. Curacao has a fine harbor, one of the finest in the West Indies. This fact was recognized from the day that a Spanish explorer, Ojeda, a friend of Columbus, discovered the island in 1499; and at intervals the great naval powers have tried to claim the harbor. Settled by Spanish.

"It was given by the Spanish superior to the governor of Venezuela in 1522 and some time afterward a Spanish settlement was established on it. The Dutch captured it in 1634 and it served a decade later as political training ground for Peter Stuyvesant, who afterward was made governor of New Amsterdam, predecessor of New York city.

"Curacao suffered attacks in 1673 and 50 years later, both times from the French. On the second occasion the French were repulsed but by the British, who remained in possession of the island for two years. After the Dutch regained control, Curacao experienced other attacks from English warships, and the island was under British control from 1805 to 1815.

"Since the latter date the Dutch have been indisputable owners of the barren little island; but there was at least a threat from an entirely different quarter in 1903 when German men of war put into Curacao during their famous debt collection expedition against Venezuela. It was rumored that Germany dreamed of making the harbor a base for control of the West Indies.

"In spite of a population more than half made up of negroes and mulattoes, and with considerable numbers of Jews, Spaniards and South Americans, Curacao (for Willemstad, if one chooses) is intensely Dutch in appearance. Dutch cleanliness has been successfully transplanted to this tropical site, and the main streets, gutters, sidewalks, and walls are spick and span. Only in some of the narrow alleys of the negro quarter is a lack of cleanliness to be noted.

"Curacao is approximately 40 miles long by three to seven miles wide, and lies 41 miles off the coast of Venezuela. The island is quite dry and produces little. Practically all food is imported, and even drinking water is brought in from the mainland for those who can afford it. Others drink rain water caught from the roofs and stored in cisterns.

Valuable as Trading Station. "The island's chief value is as a trading station, a value to which both its location and its harbor contribute. Lying just off the northern coast of South America, and controlled by a country famous for its peaceful and efficient political and commercial methods, it makes an ideal distributing and transfer point between its potentially wealthy, but sometimes turbulent neighbors of the one hand, and Europe and North America on the other. Willemstad harbor is a shaped like an entrance and a large circular basin for anchorage and wharf locations. The town is built on both sides of the narrow entrance channel and along the flanks of the basin. A pontoon bridge crosses the channel and is swung aside to permit the passage of ships. A sidewalk on the town's population is furnished by the tolls charged on this bridge. Persons wearing shoes pay 40 of one cent, persons without shoes, 25 of one cent, for each passage.

"The well-to-do Dutch of Curacao make the gesture of hiring a country tricycle to take them to the country outside the city, but few plants other than sugarcane and tobacco can be raised there. The several strictly ranches fit better into the picture.

"The famous liqueur curacao is still distilled in small quantities on the island from the small bitter oranges grown locally but the industry in the main has been taken over by Amsterdam.

"Petroleum is the greatest single factor in Curacao's present day activity, and one of the largest petroleum fields in the world is maintained on the island. The crude petroleum is brought over to tank barges around the rich Venezuelan field around Lake Maracaibo. The numerous refined products are shipped from Curacao to various parts of the world."

Profit System Ensures Consumer Fair Chance

If your goods are acceptable, or your services useful, you will receive a profit. If, on the other hand, your fellow creatures decide, wisely or unwisely, it makes no matter that they do not want your goods, or that they will get on better without your services, then you will make a loss. The profit-making system is the only one under which the consumer can be perfectly sure of obtaining the article he wants—any other scheme can only mean that he will have forced upon him the article which somebody else thinks he ought to want.

Working for a profit on an individualistic system also ensures that the people who receive the goods are the same as those who pay for them—a very important point. Based upon the interests of the consumer, it is the only system under which the consumer can ever stand a chance. We can make no money, we can do no good, unless we can persuade others to accept our services at the value that we and they jointly place upon them.—Ernest J. P. Penn, "The Confessions of a Capitalist."

Disuse of Mentality Would Mean Idiocy

It is a funny place, this world of capitalism, with its astonishing spread of ignorance and helplessness, boasting the time of its spread of education and enlightenment. There stands the thousands of property owners and millions of wage workers, none of them able to make anything, none of them knowing what to do until somebody tell them, none of them having the least notion of how it is that they find people paying them money, and things in the shops to buy with it. And when they travel they are surprised to find that savages and Esquimaux and villagers who have to make everything for themselves are more intelligent and resourceful. The more intelligent and resourceful the wonder would be if they were anything else. "We should die of idiocy through disuse of our mental faculties if we did not fill our heads with romantic nonsense out of illustrated newspapers and novels and plays and films. Such stuff keeps us alive; but it falsifies everything for us so absurdly that it leaves us more or less dangerous lunatics in the real world."—George Bernard Shaw.
