Washington and Aids Suddenly Turn Firemen

Florence, Colo.—Page Paul Revere so that he can ride forth and warn the community that "J. A. Patterson's wood shed is on fire. To the hose cart, hurry."

Whether Paul Revere did the riding and shouting remains to the imagination, but George Washington, powdered wig, short breeches, silk stockings and all, attended the fire and helped extinguish the blaze.

At George's right and left, fire hoses playing upon the blaze, stood such celebrities as Col. Henry Lee, John Marshall, Col. Edward Randolph and Gen. Nathaniel Green.

As a play, "John Breat," was being given at the high school, the fire gong sounded. George Washington and his colleagues being members of the volunteer firemen, heard duty call, and ran out to fight the fire.

Annapolis, Md.—When Admiral Dewey's flagship, the U. S. S. Olympia, ordered sold recently by a navy board of survey, is junked or turned over to a historical society, one part of it will be missing. The wheel of the ship is now one of the first sights which greet prebes entering the United States Naval academy here.

It was removed from the Olympia 30 years ago and is now just inside of the entrances to the receiving ship of the academy, the Reina Mercedes, a Spanish ship captured during the Spanish-American war and anchored here.
