Farm Board Gives O. K. To Turkey Plan

New Regional Body is Set Up to Market Output of Locals in Western States

The first extensive poultry marketing organization under the federal farm board plans is a federation of local turkey marketing cooperatives of ten western states to provide a central sales agency for the entire area. Plans for this organization were completed at a conference at Salt Lake City at which Oregon was represented by F. L. Ballard, state county agent leader of O. S. C., and Herbert Byers, manager of the Douglas county turkey growers cooperative.

If the tentative plans agreed to by representatives of some sixty local pools are ratified, Oregon turkey growers will have opportunity this fall to market their crop in a more orderly manner than ever before. The central sales plan will eliminate competition among growers for the business of the buyers.

Under the plan agreed to the local pools may retain their trade connections already established on the coast, though all eastern shipments must be cleared through the headquarters at Salt Lake. This was a concession granted by W. F. Schilling, farm board member, after its merits were shown.

Oregon is entitled to two representatives on the central board of directors, one from the west of the Cascades and one from the eastern section if that region forms its own local organization. Grades and standards will be kept at the highest to stimulate better market conditions, says Mr. Ballard.

Farming In The Future

The influence of the "merger age" is at last reaching the farm. In the words of M. G. Thornburg, Secretary of Agriculture of Iowa, "The records of the last few years indicate that we are going to have fewer farmers, larger production and lower costs of production." This means continued improvement in efficiency per man. Consolidated business farming can do more to put agriculture on a permanently stable basis than all the laws for artificial "farm relief," through price fixing ever devised.

Boy Scout Troop Has Picnic

Sidney Bloom, chairman of The Dalles district committee, presided at the first annual Mid Columbia boy scout picnic, which was held at DeMoss springs Sunday, June 22nd. Two hundred people were in attendance coming from Hood River, The Dalles, Wasco, Moro and other places.

Organization and arrangements were in charge of B. E. Davis, camping member of the Moro troop committee, assisted by other members of this boy scout troop committee, Theodore Johnston, Carl Melzer, Homer Belshie, and Omer Sayers.

A treat of ice cream was furnished by Moro Commercial Club to top off the bountiful picnic lunch furnished by the ladies and was very much enjoyed by all. An interesting program was given, including the pledge of allegiance to Our Flag by the boy scouts; singing of "America," led by George DeMoss and accompanied by Henry DeMoss at the organ. A short history of the park and description of a historic stage coach used by the DeMoss family, which is housed in one of the buildings in the park, was given by Mr. George DeMoss.

A talk on cooperation of scout parents and local citizens on the council wide work of the boy scouts was given by Mr. Bloom, who also made an appeal to the parents to send their boys to the council camp and also to feel free to contribute any food stuffs that they might have a surplus of on hand.

Homer DeMoss and George DeMoss sang "Sweet Oregon" which was composed many years ago by Henry DeMoss who accompanied them.

Scout Executive W. W. Belcher spoke to the audience on camp plans for 1930 camps which are much different than in other years, and outlined the safety precautions used to safeguard the scouts while enjoying their stay in camp.

Exhibitions of the different camp handicraft and scoutcraft activities were given by Boy Scout Harold Thogerson of Moro, James Snipes and Daniel Belcher of troop 3 The Dalles and the program closed with bugle calls by Eagle Scout Tom Fraser of troop 6 of Moro. Scout games were then played by all the scouts, and some scouts.

Those attending the picnic from The Dalles were: Scoutmaster Dr. R. S. Vicker, Sidney Bloom, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Belcher and Marie, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Sawtell, Daisy Kirby, and Wilma Sawtell and Scouts Charles Phipps, Sidney Bloom Jr., Robt. Bloom, James Snipes and Daniel Belcher.

Planting By The Moon

Sowing, reaping, breeding, butchering, shearing and other farm activities are regulated by many according to the "light" or "dark" of the moon. Such practices are foolish and only relics of the Dark Ages according to the Department of Agriculture.

Farming according to the moon has no support from any scientific point of view, as the moon has no influence on animals, the weather or the soil, though many old sayings have led people into superstitious beliefs regarding it. In France, before the revolution there was a law forbidding the cutting of trees between the new moon and the full moon.

Like many other fallacies which have gained wide currency among various people, these fanciful ideas are giving way before the investigations of science, but ages must yet elapse, perhaps, before superstition shall be entirely eradicated from the minds of men.

Home Pointers

(From School of Home Economics)

Fruit juices may be used in gelatine desserts in place of water.

Pastry requires about the hottest oven of any type of cooking.

A teaspoonful of honey or syrup, or one-eighth of a teaspoon of cream of tartar, added to each cup of sugar in a fudge frosting will often prevent a grainy texture.

The texture of biscuits is improved if the cut biscuit stands for at least 15 minutes before baking.

Heavy cream is the most satisfactory base for desserts frozen without stirring.

Cheese too soft to grate may often be put through a colander.

The longer vegetables are cooked the more food value is lost. Overcooking greatly increases the loss of vitamins and minerals, and is harmful to color, texture, and flavor.

Attractive garnishes often make the difference between an appetizing dish and an uninteresting one.

Souffles provide one of the most attractive ways of fixing left-overs. The chicken or ham left over from Sunday dinner can appear on Monday in a tasty souffle, and no one will recognize it as a left over.

Reading of advertising is worth while.

Customers Calmer Than Utility Critics

Agitation Arises From Radical Groups Rather Than Consumers

Discussing industrial growth since 1914, the Chicago Tribune indicates that utility expansion has differed from other industrial increase because about nine-tenths of the total capital invested in electric production and distribution is in fixed assets and that a light and power company may turn its capital only once in four or five years, while plants like Ford's grew from annual earnings with no call to the public for finances.

Over the years the holding companies have met with criticism and stern opposition from what are usually regarded as radical groups. They have talked unceasingly of power trusts and claimed that better rates could have been secured under public ownership. This is obviously not true in smaller cities, because literally thousands of municipally owned electric plants have been voluntarily turned over to holding companies as well as many small privately owned plants.

The Tribune says smaller cities have found this course best, unless scores or more of communities are formed into districts large enough to reduce operating costs, but always there are the added hazards of political control to contend with.

Post-war growth caused public utility industries to out-distance public understanding of it. Matthew S. Sloan, president of the National Electric Light Association says much of the criticism of utilities from those in public office or aspiring thereto is due to this condition of rapid expansion. He adds that if the holding companies had not met the huge problems of development in a large way, and with financial investments by thousands of consumers, the industry would have proved inadequate for its job in recent years. Its machinery would have broken down. Service would have retrograded instead of improved. Rates would not have been lowered. They might even have been raised. "Fortunately," said Mr. Sloan, "our customers are calmer than our critics."

Doctor Praises Press

In the opinion of Dr. Bloodgood, eminent cancer specialist of Johns Hopkins University, the newspapers of the country are "performing a splendid public service through the publication of health information."

He declares that due to the spread of sound information concerning the teeth, excessive use of stimulants and tobacco, 70 per cent of the patients threatened with cancer now seek medical aid in time to save themselves from actual infection. Before the newspapers aided in disseminating health information, less than 3 per cent sought medical aid in time.

The old idea that a doctor should not give out information to the press because of an ancient code of ethics, was criticised by Dr. Bloodgood, who believes that the public should be told in plain language whatever of benefit the medical man has to tell. Stressing the importance of attention to the teeth, the Dr. said: "Let the press continue its work. Let it advise every man and woman over 40 to have their teeth X-rayed twice a year. Bad teeth are the most common cause of breakdown."

Through preventive measures the span of human life has been materially lengthened during the past few years and it is gratifying to newspaper men to have the commendation of such a high authority for their part in bringing about this important result.
