THURSDAY - DEC. 21, 1899

In the past month England has suffered such defeat and humiliation as she has not been called upon to endure for more than a century. Not only have her troops been repulsed in every advance with heavy loss, but it has been demonstroted, at least to the average observer, that her generals have been grossly incompetent. They have seemed to count confidently on a flight of the Boers upon every "reconnaissance in force" on the part of the British. The British officers appear to have been unfamiliar with both the ground and the number and nature of the enemy. It is not entirely unreasonable if people judge them as being merely pig-headed, puffed-up military ignoramuses. Methuen learned nothing from White's incomprehensible blunder; Gatacre learned nothing from Methuen's repulse; and Buller or his generals learned nothing from all three previous disasters, but operated as if such rebuffs were just what the English liked and deserved. Doubtless these terribly humiliating mistakes will be retrieved, and successful if slow tactics will finally prevail, but it may take two or three years of time, two billions of money, and a total army of 200,000 men before the final conquest of South Africa is achieved. It is an appalling undertaking, but to back down now would be to sink into disgraceful obscurity the prestige of the English nation, and sound the death knell of the great British empire. She must go forward, though a man and a pound sterling are dropped at every foot of the long and rugged road.—Telegram.

It is with considerable pride that we read in an article in the Patent Record on the construction of the Chinese Eastern Railroad, a cut-off of the Trans-Siberian. This article shows that American tools, steel, sleepers, etcetera, are used exclusively on the line, and the American handcar is also in evidence. Also, an American engineer has the contract for building the road, and owing to his untiring energy, the display of which astounds the Manchus, the line is going up as if by magic and is expected to be completed by next year. In addition to the pride just spoken of, we swell a little more in realizing that Sherman county wheat figures largely in the construction of the Chinese Eastern, the North Pacific mills having sent a shipload of flour to that part of the Orient early this year. It is said that European competition was froze out entirely, from both the quickness and cheapness of the Yankee producers.

The Sulzer resolution recognizing the state of war existing between England and the Boers is a curiosity. It is all but intervening in its intent, while proclaiming a strict neutrality; and it protests against "the barbarous manner in which the war has been conducted by Great Britain." This is good. It seems to us the shoe is on the other foot. Look at the way the barbarous Boers butchered over 1300 Britishers last week. It seems to us also that Great Britain's prestige will be gone ere long if some other nation doesn't step in and intervene.

Representative Roberts and others of his ilk will never hold a seat in congress, no matter how highly they may be respected in their own community, and the sooner this fact becomes known to the world at large the better. Nothing is so repugnant to our system of social and sexual equality as admitting one man's legal right to the possession of more than one woman. One is enough.

When does the 20th century begin? Since the newspapers are unable to come to an amicable agreement, why not let our literary undertake to find out for them?

Senator McBride is chairman of one committee and a member of seven, while Senator Simon is a member also of seven also. This is a good showing for Oregon's senators, more especially as they are both comparatively new men. Let us hope more honors will fall upon them ere their terms expire.

It is rather dangerous to be an officer in the British army just now.

Sashes of very broad flowered ribbon fringed on either side.

White serge jacket suits adorned with gilt braiding and gilt buttons.

Detachable revers of white pique with broad wale to be worn with Eton jackets.

Displays of white summer millinery accompanied by white ostrich feather boas.

Wash suits, prettily trimmed, and separate pique, duck and linen skirts for girls.

Two-toned trimmed sailors in combinations of blue, brown, gray and black with white.

Feather boas in all the light shades to accompany foulard and other summer costumes.

Stitched crash hats for golf or cycling trimmed with crepe de chine, quills and plaid scarfs.

Manila hats for morning wear in white and colors, decorated with dotted malines, gauze and quills.

Evening gowns of white silk appliqued with sprays of flowers, and their foliage made of colored chiffon and outlined with silk or gold cord.

Broad collars with revers attached made of tucked or hemstitched lawn or nainsook elaborately trimmed with valenciennes lace or batiste embroidery.

Dressy costumes trimmed with broad lace flouncings, scantily applied, with their lower scalloped edge outlined with a narrow chiffon ruching or a silk fringe.

Organdie gowns in shades of heliotrope, blue and pink, with an abundance of black or white lace trimmings in the form of bands, deep flouncings, gimps and appliques.

TREASURES IN THE EAST.

Sir Jung Bahadur, the prime minister to the king of Nepal, has a hat made of diamonds, worth over $100,000, and perched on top is a single ruby of incalculable value.

Orientals prize pearls very highly and one Indian rajah has an embroidered turban of pearls worth $70,000. The largest pearl known is owned by the shah of Persia and is unappraisable.

When Queen Victoria was proclaimed empress of India some of the native kings at the celebrations wore costumes that beggar description. A small item in the attire of one rajah was a pair of gloves made of flexible golden scales incrusted with diamonds, having in the center of each back an emerald as big as a hazel nut, and ending in bangles studded with rubies, the gloves being worth not less than $200,000.

India is the treasure home of the world. For ages Ceylon and Burmah supplied the world with the rarest gems, and the eastern potentates kept the finest for their own use. Of all the jewels, the most noted belong to the Guicowar of Baroda. They are valued at $15,000,000. His chief diamond necklace contains a stone called the star of the south, a Brazilian stone of 254 carats, for which $400,000 was paid, the whole necklace being valued at $1,000,000.

HIGH LIGHTS.

Of two evils chose the one you have worried through before.

Even people who can't hold their tongues know when other people ought to.

When the doctor tells a woman to diet she eats less at the table and more in the pantry.

The woman who has her first spectacles always believes she wears them just to rest her eyes.

A man never knows what he can do until he tries, and then he wishes he had done something else.

There are two public nuisances—the people who never carry umbrellas and the people who carry them all the time.

When a woman wishes to do something real out and out reckless and extravagant she dreams of going to Europe.

One of life's greatest problems is this: Do people get stout because they are lazy, or are they lazy because they are stout?—Chicago Daily Record.

REFLECTIONS OF AN OLD MAID

The lovers who enjoy reading the same books together will be happy in their married life.

A lifetime of carefully studied deference can be killed in a moment by a single ironic gleam of the eye.

In spring the housewife remembers that hope rhymes with soap and suds with buds.

The poems not good enough to leap into fame are generally bad enough to leap into flame.

To be remembered by a woman, it is only necessary to tell her something nice about herself that she knows already, but fancies that nobody else has found out.

What a young man likes is to look into a pretty face and make remarks that cause it to part its red lips and show its white teeth. What an old man likes is to look into a pretty face and make remarks that cause it to part its red lips and show its white teeth.—Detroit Free Press.

STRAY SHOTS.

A man who is drowning seldom catches at a straw.

The man who boasts that he has not been inside of a church for three years should have no trouble in guessing why people make him pay cash.

No woman has a right to suspect that she has lost her husband's love simply because he doesn't help her on with her rubbers, especially if he is 40 and fat.—N. Y. Journal.

A Doubting Thomas.

"Dis hyah talk 'bout Mother Eve bein' tempted wif er apple," remarked the colored philosopher, "am de rankest kind o' nonsenseness. Now ef it had er bin er watermillin, den yo' all might talk sho 'nuff."—Chicago Daily News.

Divided Responsibility.

Kitty—Does the man marry the woman or the woman marry the man?

Tom—Sometimes one way and sometimes t'other; but usually the man and the woman are equally to blame for it.—Boston Transcript.

Spitting Blood

"I used to cough a great deal and spit blood, and my neighbors in Dayton, Ohio, where I live, said among themselves that I had consumption, although they did not tell me so to my face, for fear of making me despondent. I kept on coughing and trying different sorts of medicines, but nothing seemed to reach my trouble until I got hold of a bottle of Acker's English Remedy. I prayed for health all the time, and my prayers were answered as soon as I began taking this celebrated English expectorant and tonic. Since my recovery I have told hundreds of sufferers from coughs, colds and weak lungs that Acker's English Remedy would cure them. Some of them won't try it, and it does seem to me terrible when anyone deliberately refuses to be cured. There ought to be a law compelling consumptives to take it. Even if they don't care for their own lives, the public's welfare should be considered. Don't you think so too? I hope such a law will soon be enforced."
