Ed Hutchinson, who has been spending the holidays with friends in Wasco, returned Thursday to Portland. Mr. Hutchinson is contemplating a trip to Washington, D. C., in connection with the securing of a patent on a mechanical contrivance which he has invented.

Mrs. Lizzie Fuller entertained a number of friends to a turkey dinner on Christmas. Those present were: Mr. S. O. Clodfelter and family, Mr. W. H. Ellis and family, Grandma Reid, Grandpa Tate, Miss Florence Tate, David Reid and Ronald McNab. Mr. Reed, who was expected to be in attendance, did not arrive from Montreal in time.

Ninety-nine dancing tickets and one hundred and forty spectators' tickets were sold for the masquerade ball on New Year's eve. People from all over the county and a large number from Gilliam county were present. Though there was a large crowd present, the hall was large enough to accommodate them and afford everyone a good time. The masks were worn until midnight and prizes for the best sustained characters were awarded to Miss Mae Smith and Mr. Guy Andrews. These successful events help to make Wasco or any other community a commercial center.

A party of young friends called on Miss Nell MacPherson and spent New Year's eve., watching the coming of the new year.

At the school meeting at the school building last Saturday afternoon W. E. Tate was elected to succeed himself as director; also a 10-mill tax was voted to cover the general running expenses of the school. Beside this business the assembly ordered that the board of directors obtain estimates on the cost of adding another room to the present school building. The board was authorized also to make the necessary preparation for the coming field meet to be held this year in Wasco.

On Thursday morning the lower ware house, belonging to the Independent Warehouse and Milling Co., toppled off its foundation, doing considerable damage to the warehouse and throwing a hundred sacks of wheat out onto the ground. The accident occurred about 5:40 o'clock in the morning. Ham. McKane, who sleeps in the office adjoining the warehouse, built a fire at 5 o'clock as usual and all was well. Fortunately, Mr. McKane was at hand and put out the fire in the stove, thus avoiding any danger from that source. There was no damage done to the office fixtures. The large amount of rain which has fallen recently is thought to have loosened the foundation of the warehouse, thus allowing the underpinning to shift. The damage will mainly consist in the cost of righting the warehouse.

Merry Christmas Party

Perhaps one of the most enjoyable occasions of the season was the Christmas party given by the Epworth League Reading Circle at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. N. Crosfield on Friday evening last. The interior of the home was appropriately decorated with mistletoe, holly, Christmas bells, etc., and the outside was illuminated by various styles of lights, causing the residence to present a very attractive appearance from its enviable position on the hillside overlooking the city. Mrs. A. M. Hicks, who has the literary work of the League in charge, put forth special effort to make the evening's entertainment suggestive of the Yule Tide, and the enjoyment expressed by the guests attested the reward of her efforts. One of the interesting features of the evening was the unique style in which Santa Claus made his appearance. He was in a great hurry but took time to find a present for each of the fifty guests. After the gifts were opened and laughed over, several songs were rendered, the singer being Mr. Howard Chamberlain, Mr. Kimsley of Boston, D. Morse and Miss Jennett Crosfield. Miss Florence Barnett gave two excellent and entertaining readings in a masterful manner. Mr. and Mrs. Crosfield served punch during the entire evening and a beautiful lunch at the proper time. Those who enjoy these meetings of the League will often think of its delightful party of Christmas '07 and that all enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Crosfield in proven by the lateness of the hour they dispersed, which we refrain from mentioning. A. GUEST.
