

A Ministerial View

At a recent editorial convention, a minister made the following toast: "To save the editor from starvation, take his paper and pay for it promptly. To save him from bankruptcy, advertise in his paper liberally. To save from despair, give him every item of news you know. To save him from profanity, write your correspondence plainly on one side of the sheet and send it in as early as possible. Because he is willing to give churches and other worthy causes free advertising, don't expect him to work continually for his health. His space is stocked in trade and he must live as well as preachers, secret orders and other organizations. Newspapers as a rule donate more free space, do more for the community in which they live, than should be expected, and yet some are not satisfied—are always ready to kick and find fault. To save him from mistakes, bury him. Dead people are the only ones that never make mistakes."
