Nearly everyone in this section of the country is through with his heading.

Jasper Rogers went to Gold Hill Wednesday to meet his daughter, Mrs. Flora Carter, of Sherman county, Oregon, who will spend a few weeks here visiting friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Abe Weiss and daughter, Hattie, are visiting relatives and friends here. They are also looking for a location.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. L. Jones were trading in Medford one day last week.

Martin Brothers started their header last week.

Miss Clara Richardson has gone on a visit to Belina, Washington, where she will be the guest of Mrs. Anna Linley.

Bird Johnston and Jasper Hanna have gone to Klamath where they are employed by Pelton Brothers in haying.

Milas M. Richardson has gone to Klamath Falls where he has accepted a position as clerk in the store of his brother-in-law, A. J. Manning.

Tom and Hal Hamrick, of Central Point, were visitors at the home of M. H. Gordon last week.

Will "Coon" Them All

The following self-explanatory communication from the county court has been received for publication:

"The County Court has decided that it is for the general good of Jackson county that a suitable exhibit of our resources and products be made at the forthcoming State Fair to be held in Salem, Oregon, September 10th to 15th, 1906.

"We have secured the services of Mr. J. E. Watts, of Medford, Oregon, to collect and superintend our exhibit and we are desirous of calling the attention of every person in the county to the fact that we want each and every one to contribute something toward furthering this exhibit, in order that we may be able not only to make a creditable showing, but also, that we may place Jackson county at the head of the list of Oregon counties, where she rightfully belongs.

"We have the goods. Let us display them. If each person who has something good in the nature of grains, grasses, fruit, vegetables, etc., will take the pains to save a nice sample, Mr. Watt will be around in due time, if notified, and collect them, or they can bring them in and leave them in the warehouse of Mr. Perry, at Medford, who has generously offered us the use of the same for the purpose of collecting our exhibit.

"It only takes a few minutes time to save a nice bundle of grain or box of fruit, or sack of onions, or a mineral specimen, if we will only take the interest that we should.

"We can 'coon' them all if we will get in and do our part. Hoping and feeling assured that the newspapers will lend their valuable assistance and will help inform the people and agitate this subject, and that the people gen-

Soldier's Sense of Humor.
A high naval official, now dead, often cited as an example of ghastly humor an incident that befell a young woman during the civil war.

"She was good and kind," he would say, "and during the war she visited the hospitals daily, distributing fruits and flowers and tracts.

"One morning on her rounds a young soldier, immediately after she had passed him, set up a loud laugh.

"She turned and looked at him in surprise. His seemed a pitiful case. Nothing of him but his face was visible on the little white bed, and this young face was sadly thin and pale. Nevertheless he laughed like one possessed. His mirth resounded through the grewsome room.

"The visitor returned to him.

"Will you tell me what amuses you?" she said.

"Why, ma'am," said he, "here you have given me a tract on the sin of dancing when I've got both legs shot off."—Baltimore Herald.

Careful of Her Nose.

Many interesting stories of courtiers and favorites at the old French court are found in the memoirs of the Marquise de Crequi. She says that on certain solemn occasions kings of France wore ermine linings to their robes, but ermine became scarce, and she writes: "The anointing of Louis XV. was retarded some years for want of this fur for the court mantles, and at the coronation of Louis XIV. they actually used catskin." Superbly elegant was the Duchesse de la Ferté, who generally was carried around under a canopy. The marquise goes into ecstasies concerning this particular duchesse, whose eyes "had the most disdainful expression I ever saw, though they had a slight cast in them." But her supreme elegance can be appreciated when it is known "she never blew her nose for fear of spoiling her Greek contour, but dabbed it at intervals with a small square of cambric."

Benjamin Franklin's Wife.

A very unflattering description of Benjamin Franklin's wife is taken from the diary of Daniel Fisher, who was Franklin's secretary for a short time. "She sat on the floor at a neighbor's. She assumed the airs of extraordinary freedom and great humility, lamented heavily the misfortunes of those who are unhappily infected with a too tender or benevolent disposition, said she believed all the world claimed the privilege of troubling her pappy—so she usually calls Mr. Franklin—with their calamities and distress, giving us a general history of many such wretches and their impertinent applications." He mentions "the turbulence and jealousy and pride of her disposition" and the violence of her invectives. Pointing to Franklin's son one day, she exclaimed, "There goes the greatest villain upon earth!"

The Persian Way.

They have curious methods in Persia of insuring law and order. A failure of the crops had resulted in a dear loaf, which much enraged the populace. In order to quell the tumult the shah ordered a number of bakers to receive several hundred strokes with a rod, besides a few minor little attentions, such as the amputation of an ear or two.

A TARTAR TRICKSTER

The Way He Tried to Sell a Valise, a Foreigner.

At the annual fair in Nijni Novgorod I stepped with a German-Russian friend into a saddlery, where he wished to purchase a valise. He picked out one for which the Tartar merchant named a price that was evidently much in excess of its real value. My friend was making the usual feint under such circumstances of leaving the store when he noticed that the dealer, with a rapid movement, stuck a paper in the outside pocket of his valise. Not being a greenhorn in Russia, he knew immediately what the Tartar was up to.

"But, barin," said the latter, calling him back, "come. Look at the leather and the lining, silk all through. Please examine it carefully." He handed the valise again to my friend and turned back to his stock, apparently looking for other catches to show. With a sly wink my friend extracted a ten ruble note from the outer pocket of the valise and hid it in his hand. Then he said: "Don't trouble yourself any longer. This valise seems to be what you say it is, and I will take it."

The Tartar grinned broadly as he turned around, satisfied that his little trick had succeeded. Then while my friend pretended to count out the purchase price he took hold once more of the valise in order accidentally to discover the bank note in it. I shall never forget his eyes, which bulged out of their sockets, or the petrified smile on his face when he found his money gone. He was so bewildered that he stammered like a drunken man.

"The fellow really ought to get a lesson," my friend said to me in German, while he kept the trickster in suspense for several minutes before handing him back the bank note, together with the valise, which the dealer now offered for less than half of what he had demanded before.—Sigmund Kranz in Booklovers' Magazine.

CONVERSATION "DON'TS."

Don't indulge in personalities. They invariably return worse than they started out.

Don't mention family feuds. It embarrasses the listener, and you are sure to regret it.

Don't talk of the cost of things. It gives the rich a chance for boastfulness and may be embarrassing to the poor.

Don't tell your personal interests, occupations, hopes or aspirations. No body wants to hear them, and you give your dignity a mortal stab.

Don't discuss children. If you have any the chances are you are boring those who have not. If you have none, you are sure to be mortally wounding those who have.

Don't discuss dress. The lady whose evening gown you are scoring may have come direct from Paris, wearing the newest thing, and the whole subject is a hopeless one anyway.—Harper's Weekly.
