THE CAR SHORTAGE.

The cupidity of railroad companies, and the soullessness of corporations in general, is illustrated by some of the phases of the car shortage. When there are but a certain restricted number of cars available—about one twelfth of what is required to handle the normal business of the country—the cars are distributed carefully where they will yield the largest revenue for the railroad company.

Idaho is shipping potatoes to California, while Oregon cannot get cars to ship potatoes. California is shipping its immense orange crop with ease, and using all the cars necessary to do it, while Oregon cannot get cars to ship its hops. The Portland shipper of hops in consolidated lots can get a few cars for shipments, but the producer in the country districts cannot get a car. The producers are forced to make local shipments of their hops to Portland, paying the railroad company half a cent a pound, and from this point the hops are sent east, resulting in a considerable additional profit for the railroad company, and corresponding loss to the producer. Portland commission houses have the greatest difficulty to get cars for immediate use, as their commodities are perishable, and their markets constantly changing. It is said that the W. B. Glafke commission house solicited a car from the railroad company for the purpose of making a shipment of potatoes a month ago. They are still waiting for the car to be furnished. This is a fair illustration of the difficulties the business interests of Oregon are up against. They are absolutely helpless. Hustling, industry, ability, count for nothing. The best business getter, and the most enterprising methods, are rendered futile and practically put out of the commercial game by the car situation.—Journal.

LIBERTINES AND LAW.

A crime was committed in Portland this week, wherein one young man took the life of another, to atone for the debauching of his sister. The murderer went at once to the Sheriff's office and gave himself up, telling his story in a straight-forward way, of the cause leading up to the killing. The daily papers published many columns of the circumstances where the murdered young man had ruined the life of a too trusting girl; the parents and brother insisting that he marry the girl and keep his promise. After nearly an hour of pleading, the brother shot three bullets into his body, resulting in almost instantaneous death. Thus ended the worthless life of a libertine, rapist and seducer.

The Oregonian comments on the moral law: "Briefly summed up, these laws assert the right of a man to live, a rapist, the right of a husband to slay any man who commits adultery with his wife, the right of a woman or her near relative to kill her seducer, the right of a virtuous woman or her near relative to slay a man who traduces her character."—Tillamook Herald.

Side Dishes have been crowded out of the HERALD by reason of increasing advertisements in the paper.
