

CENTRAL POINT HERALD

LANCASTER & PATTERSON, PUBLISHERS
S. A. PATTERSON, EDITOR.
J. E. LANCASTER, BUSINESS MANAGER

An independent local newspaper devoted to the interests of Central Point and the Rogue River Valley. Published Every Thursday. Subscription price, $1.50 per year, in advance.

Entered as Second-class Matter, May 4, 1906, at the Post Office at Central Point, Oregon, under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The revival of interest in the Rogue River Horticultural society is a matter which should receive the hearty encouragement of every citizen of this valley who is in any way interested in the upbuilding of that most important industry. In union there is strength and in organized effort along any industrial or commercial line there cannot fail to be realized benefits vast and varied by all who are interested.

By looking at the individuals it is often as hard to tell which is the baby of the family as it is to determine which is the head of the house. If duties and desires were synonymous, we'd all look like a lot of little angels. Hot air dries up the springs of sympathy when it is constantly blowing upon us. A handsome face is usually acquainted with the best grade of mirrors. Take good care of your family, and you will have no family cares. Having a sense of humor is often as comforting to a man as it is discomfoting to his enemies.

Central Point, being in the center of the best fruit section in the valley, should take an interest in the success of this society and it is to be hoped that every fruitgrower in this section and in the entire valley will become a member and add his influence and experience to the advancement of the best methods of fruit culture in this favored valley.

The difference between a magnate stealing a big block of government land and a schoolboy stealing a few paragraphs for his school oration from the speech of a U. S. senator is the difference between speedy punishment and disgrace in the case of the boy, and long drawn legal complications, appeals, excuses and winking with the other eye by courts and officials in the case of the magnate. And yet we teach our children that this great country of ours gives every man exactly the same chance and that rich and poor, great and small are equal before the law and in the eyes of their fellows.

Medical authorities claim that a new "specific" for la grippe has been discovered in an unpronounceable powerful poison but say that any attempt on the part of patients to administer the drug themselves without the aid of a physician would be criminal folly. Most old-fashioned persons will therefore probably stay with a little quinine and a good deal of whiskey in their efforts to make the disease lose its grip on them.

A Roseburg man killed his bed-fellow because the latter snored, and his defense will be insanity. A big, stout, well developed snore belonging to the other fellow is enough to make any man insane, without the aid of experts.

The town election is over and next comes the water works.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN H. SMITH

PERF PARAGRAPHS.

The only deeds that it is wise to board up are those appertaining to real estate.

Being constantly conscious of one's own faults is punishment enough for anybody.

A heavy purse goes a long way toward making a light heart.

Most of us say that we are willing to be criticised, but we don't break our necks trying to find some one to do the job.

The only place where a good cook is of no account is where there is an empty larder.

By looking at the individuals it is often as hard to tell which is the baby of the family as it is to determine which is the head of the house.

If duties and desires were synonymous, we'd all look like a lot of little angels.

Hot air dries up the springs of sympathy when it is constantly blowing upon us.

A handsome face is usually acquainted with the best grade of mirrors.

Take good care of your family, and you will have no family cares.

Having a sense of humor is often as comforting to a man as it is discomfoting to his enemies.

Fame.
How can we reach into the skies
And pull down lasting fame?
How can we win that worthy prize,
A grand and honored name?
How can we make the people take
Some notice as we pass
And keep our memory as green
As anybody's grass?
Is there no smooth and patent way
To help us turn the trick?
And can we not the rules obey
And get there double quick?
Or must we spoil our hands with toil
And burn the midnight lamp
Ere fame will decorate us with
Its rubber O. K. stamp?
Yes, there are short cuts to the height,
And all may tread the way.
You do not have to work all night
Or for the honor pay.
Get cured of ills by some one's pills,
By taking just a case,
And every paper in the land
Will gladly print your face.
And who shall say that kind is not
As good as any bread?
That you might scheme for, toil and plot
And work an age to land?
You may not find the lasting kind
That way, but plug ahead.
'Twill do you every bit as good
To use when you are dead.

Beat Father Time.
"I notice your watch is fifteen minutes slow."
"That doesn't bother me any."
"But your clock is half an hour fast."
"Yes, I got up by one and got to bed by the other."
Other Point of View.
"The lot of the common soldier must be an enviable one."
"Why do you think so?"
"On account of a few general remarks by the general."
"Wait until you can get some private remarks from the private before making up your mind."
Small Addition.
"There goes a man who claims that he never told a lie."
"Is it true?"
"Not by a long ways."
"Then why does he claim it?"
"Thinks he might as well tell another one as not."
The Real Thing.
"You seem to be well up in love letter writing."
"Thank you."
"Where did you learn it?"
"Correspondence school."
Time to Realize.
"Ethel's sweet feminine helplessness seems to make her very attractive to men."
"Well, it ought to. She has been a long time acquiring it."

Natural Consequence.
"My father was poor but honest."
"Honest man, was he?"
"Indeed he was."
"Then it is superfluous to say that he was poor."
An Exception.
"No one can be in two places at once."
"Well, I have seen a lawyer in the courtroom and in the air at the same time."
