A DEAR LITTLE FINGER.

So Regarded by Little Clarence's Mama and by His Papa Too.

"Did oo hurt oo dear 'litty finger?" So said little Clarence Sniffly's mother to little Clarence, who had just caught one of his fingers in a drawer and pinched and bruised it a little.

"Did oo hurt oo dear 'litty finger?" she said. And she was also concerned deeply for fear he had done the finger some serious harm, and so straight-way she sent for the doctor.

And when the doctor came he looked it over and said it really wasn't anything very bad, that there were no bones broken, just a little abrasion of the skin, but he guessed he'd put a little bandage around it to protect it until it got well, and he didn't think he would need to come again, but if Mrs. Sniffly should want the bandage renewed, why, if she would bring little Clarence to the office he would fix it up.

And did Mrs. Sniffly want the bandage renewed? She was at the doctor's office with little Clarence the next day, and the day after that, and the next day, and so on continuously. And did the doctor think he'd lose his nail? And would it leave a scar? She'd hate to have one of little Clarence's fingers scarred. The doctor reassured her from day to day as he put on the fresh wrappings, while Clarence played around through all these days with that dear little finger done up in a big bandage.

But then a time came when even Mrs. Sniffly thought it was safe to take the bandage off, and lo! the wound had left no scar at all! "Ard isn't that delightful?" Mrs. Sniffly said to Mr. Sniffly, because she'd hate to have Clarence have a scar on his finger.

And Mr. Sniffly said to Mrs. Sniffly that it was very nice and he was glad it had come out all right, but when in due time the doctor's bill came in he sighed a little and said to himself that he hoped little Clarence wouldn't get his finger caught in a drawer very often.—New York Sun.

The Revolving Cat.

Little Susie has always been deeply interested in mechanical toys and numbers several among her choicest possessions. Recently the family cat, having apparently eaten something which disagreed with her, began a mad race around the room, leaping chairs, diving under sofas and turning somersaults.

A Kick Coming.

Atlas—Drat these modern office buildings!

A Blow to the Gossips.

"Why are all you women down on Mrs. Weedes? You were very sorry for her when her husband died."

It Would Seem So.

Gyer—I understand young Seers was married last week. Myer—Yes. He married a clairvoyant. Gyer—Indeed! Case of love at second sight, I suppose?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Better Than the Curfew.

"There don't seem to be any children on the street in your town." "Nope. They're all stayin' in. One of the lions in th' show up yonder got out of his cage yesterday an' ain't been caught yet."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Business Practice.

"I don't see why you want to marry a girl who is an embroidery expert." "What has her business to do with it?" "Why, she is such a desisting young person."—Baltimore American.

Very Remarkable.

"He's a remarkable man. Takes a cold bath every morning." "But"—"Without bragging about it!"—Kansas City Journal.

A Sad Case.

A story is told by a lawyer of Little Rock, Ark., about the sad case of a native of that town who sought justice by reason of the theft of a horse belonging to him.

"Can't I have him arrested for usury, then?" demanded the man indignantly.

"What on earth do you mean?" "Daggonne it, mister; he used the horse, didn't he? Yes, sir; he used him mighty hard by the looks of him!"

Defined.

"Pa, what's an infidel?" "A man who has never had reason as yet to believe his time had come."—Chicago Record-Herald.

"Say, Want Your Scissors Ground?"

—Harper's Weekly.

Helping the Burglar Out.

"John," she whispered, "there's a burglar in the drawing room. He has just knocked against the piano and hit several keys at once."

"I'll go down," said he. "Oh, John, don't do anything rash!" "Rash! Why, I'm going to help him. You don't suppose he can remove the piano from the house without assistance!"—London Throno.

An Omission.

Magistrate—What is the charge against you this time? Boggs—They cotched me a-stealing oranges, yer worship. Magistrate—Didn't I tell you when you were here before not to steal anything more? Boggs—No, yer worship; you said not to steal any more lemons, but yer didn't say a word about oranges.—London Graphix.

Wide Awake.

Fuddle—You know Stocks, don't you? Doctor—Yes, indeed. He is now a patient of mine. Fuddle—Pretty wide awake man, isn't he? Doctor—I should say so. I am treating him for insomnia.—London Tit-Bits.

Quite the Contrary.

The Sympathetic Friend—It must be very hard to lose money at the races. Smith (a plunger)—Hard! Hang it, old chap, it's the easiest thing in the world!—London Opinion.

There is no use running. To set out in time is the main point.—La Fontaine.

Cheering.

Aspirant—You have heard my voice, Professor. Now please tell me candidly what branch of vocalism it is best adapted for. Professor—Well—cheering!
