WHY DON'T YOU SPEAK FOR YOURSELF JOHN?

We are told, in history and poem, that John Alden was sent to induce Priscilla to marry Miles Standish, a colonial military man. But when the young man proposed the message which he was sent to ask, he was asked: "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

Let us take that sentence as a moral for the conduct of our selves in regards to the community in which we live. In every community we find people who are too retiring to promote their own welfare. They are willing to help a more prominent competitor even to his own injury. The same attitude is mirrored in the relationship of himself to his community. Where this civic lethargy, and this business inactivity is found—there is also found a nice quiet little city where people are cautioned to close their mufflers when they drive thru the main thoroughfares lest they should wake the dead.

There is no man or woman who lives in a community who does not owe some service to that community. It is their duty to render that service and to even make sacrifices to give service to the place where they live. If there is a citizen in any community who is not willing to lend assistance to his community in furthering its growth and the upbuilding of its industries, he is not worthy of the position he holds. He should be rebuked by any progressive citizen whom he might come in contact with. The solution for a good town is for everyone to get in and push and disconnect those who are inclined to drag their feet. If the ones who will not aid the community could be dropped from it, then you would see it grow and prosper but nothing can be done by the perpetual knocking of every venture which is proposed.

The feud is still on in Washington society circles. The fact is that Mrs. Nick Longworth and Mrs. Gann hold more of the spotlight than does the farm relief bill, for which the special session was called to pass.

If the farm relief bill hangs fire for a short while long-

"How did your uncle Ned come to be a bachelor?"
"They didn't have cars when he was young."

er the farmers will have to find some relief from the farm relief bill.

True to form, our district representative in the national congress is accused of nurturing the bigger business interests of the country in his recommendation on the tariff bill. Why should he be bothered, he just can't get over that habit and the people don't seem to get over the habit of electing him every two years.
