Stage Cough

One of the highest compliments paid Edwin Booth was accorded him by an old negro servant who went to see him in "Richeieu" during Booth's visit to Savannah. The next day she expressed to her mistress great concern for the health of the actor. "Poor old man," she said, "he can't last long. Dat cough will carry him to his grave sure."

Hard Food Essential

A recent survey among leading dentists disclosed the fact that oral hygienists consider hard food an absolute essential for children. Ordinary diet, they pointed out, consists mostly of soft foods, with the result that the teeth and gums do not get proper exercise, or such essential elements as lime. By including hard, crunchy food in one or more meals every day the deficiency can be quickly overcome.

CHURCH ANNOUNCEMENTS

FEDERATED CHURCH NOTES

J. M. Johnson, Pastor
In the Bible school we begin the study of the book of Matthew and for the next six months we shall be with this interesting author. This week we have the first and second chapters. The Childhood of Jesus is the topic. Our school opens at 9:45 A.M. All are welcome.

In the young peoples' devotional service at 6:30 in the evening they will study the subject: Why Pray For Others? (Consecration meeting Scripture references found in Acts 2:39; James 1:5-7.)

In the church services the New Year upon us, the Pastor will preach in the morning on the subject: The Master's Trust; and in the evening on the subject: Self First. All are invited to these services. If you are not an attendant somewhere else start the year right and come to church.

The ministerial meeting at the church on Monday was not as well attended as was hoped, there being only ten ministers and four minister's wives present. Nevertheless, the meeting was full of interest. One new man was present, Rev. Fred F. Schell of Phoenix. A new thing was done: The Rogue River Ministerial Association Basket-ball League was formed. Now do not jump at the conclusion that the ministers are going to play ball. They are trying to provide a place for those young fellows who did not make the school teams, and who yet want a chance to win some games. Rev. Mr. Thompson of Ashland is chairman of the committee on management, and Rev. C. B. Porter of Medford, and Rev. C. C. Rarick of Grants Pass are the other members of that committee.

The paper in the afternoon given by Mr. Rarick was on the subject: The Future of the Church and Religion. The speaker confessed that he was not sure of his own convictions in the matter. As to the true church, the cause of God in the earth, yes, that is assured. But of the denominations, sects, etc., there must be decrease. He says there are things that should make every minister take notice. There were several who commented on the paper.

A very interesting thing for next Sunday should be the Sunday school secretary's report for the year. It will cover a wide range of interest. Annual elections will now be the order of the day in nearly every department of the church work. Let all be deeply concerned as to who shall be the leaders, and then who shall follow the leaders.

Apricots for Desserts

WHEN you cast around in your mind for a new dessert, why not include the aristocratic apricot in your survey? For the apricot is capable of as many uses as the peach and is less often used only because its capabilities are less familiar.

All Year Use

Of course, the fresh apricot can't be bought all year around, but the canned fruit, which is put up in factories near the orchards when the golden apricot is meltingly ripe, can be obtained any time. Some recipes which are new and have been tested by a trained dietitian are here given. Don't they sound tempting?

Apricot Cranberry Tarts: Cook together until creamy and rather thick the following ingredients: one cup of canned cranberry sauce, one cup of apricot pulp (made by pressing apricots through a sieve) and four teaspoons of sugar mixed with one teaspoon of flour. Cool and put in previously-baked tart shells. Top with whipped cream. This makes ten to twelve tarts.

Peach and Apricot Filling: Whip one cup of cream, and add six tablespoons of confectioner's sugar. Cut one-half cup of canned peaches, one-half cup of canned apricots and one-half cup of candied cherries into small pieces and drain well. Fold into the whipped cream. Use the filling in cream puffs, between layers of cake or as a garnish on a simple cornstarch or rice pudding.

To lend variety to tapioca and cornstarch puddings for the children, put an apricot half in the bottom of the individual mold and fill with the pudding; top with another apricot half.
