

Gold Hill Notes

by Mildred Tilley
855-1902

Members of the Hanby Elementary school paper, the Hanby Highlights, are: Editor, Margery Hodson; Assistant Editor, Renee Holderness; News, Joan Czowski and Janice Czowski; Feature, Melissa Deuel and Arthur Cabral; Review, Jerry Martin; Sports, Mike Henderson and Dan Estremado; Cover, Melinda Fluck; Sales, Larry Washburn and Steve Hendrickson; Column, Cindy Kellogg and Elba Corona; Advertising, Tom A. Beth and Jim Lees; Distribution, Ken Foley and Reg Genaw; Manager Bill Eicher.

Mrs. Fern Hughes is a hospital patient this week.

Mrs. Earl Moore has an exhibit at the Gold Hill Library five paintings. They include the following entitled Lyman House, the Covered Bridge across Evans Creek, Little Log Cabin in the Siskiyou Mountains, Lonely Cabin and Log Fort at the Dardenelles.

Mr. Ashley Browne returned to the Rogue Valley Memorial Hospital for further surgery. This is Mr. Browne's second time for surgery in recent weeks.

Mrs. Melvin Johnson of Kanes Creek Road is bus driver for school district 6.

Leroy Sutton, Luck and Steven Hendrickson left over the weekend for Eastern Oregon in hopes that this time they will get a buck due to the rainy weather.

Mrs. Beverly Washburn is substitute mail carrier for a few days for Mr. Hamilton Ecker.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard King are spending a few days at Feather River, California, visiting friends.

The county road grader is smoothing out the rough spots on Galls Creek Road.

Mrs. Rose Wheeler of Roseburg has been visiting her son and family, Mrs. and Mrs. Jim Wheeler and children on Galls Creek Road.

Mrs. Wheeler will spend a few days in Washington before returning to her home in Roseburg.

Miss Jan Kinney has returned from Boise, Idaho, where she enjoyed a month's vacation, a graduation present from her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jess Kinney.

Jan graduated from Crater High School this year. Jan's sister, Lynn, now Mrs. Lynn Franks of Pine Grove, California, also visited her parents.

Lynn was a graduate of 1962 at Crater High School.

Mrs. Sam Givens, Mrs. Mary Robbins, Mrs. Tom Burton, all of Footh Creek, and Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Caldwell of Gold Hill were guests at the home of Mrs. Lola Guy on Galls Creek Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryon Brown spent the weekend camping and hunting.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lindsey and children, Amanda, Sandy, and Randy, of Eagle Point, spent the evening enjoying music at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hendrickson and children.

The list of room mothers for the Gold Hill schools is complete with the exception of one mother.

At the Margaret E. Patrick Elementary School Room mothers are: Mrs. Mildred

Mack's room, Lois Newman; Mrs. Alice Beneka's room Barbara Deuel; Mr. Paul McBeth's room, Nancy Eicher; Mrs. Miller's room, Mrs. Martin; Mr. Battelle's room, Marlene Pierson; Mr. Parker's room, no mother chosen as yet; Mr. Walter Doherty's room, Carol Dunlap; and Mr. Hollaway's room Jeanne Holderness.

The Girls Scouts will meet every Saturday afternoon between the hours of 3:00 and 5:00.

Mrs. Marie Pierson is the Scout leader, assisted by Jan Kinney.

At the present time the girls are working on their cooking badges. Mrs. Pierson expresses the hope that Saturday is the best day for their meetings, as an extra hour can be had to help the girls earn their badges sooner.

Mrs. Pierson wants to express her thanks of the parents that transportation has been ready for the girls.

If there are any questions you would like answered concerning the Girl Scouts please feel free to call Mrs. Marie Pierson, 855-1390.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Griffiths visited the Jack Hendricksons last week.

The Rev. and Mrs. Thomas White visited their son, Raymond LaVeme White, at Alameda, California, last weekend.

He will leave for a tour of Japan and other far east points on the USS Enterprise this month.

Circulation report for the Gold Hill Library is as follows: September 1964: Gold Hill adult circulation: 541; juvenile circulation, 225, for a total of 766.

September 1965: Gold Hill adult circulation: 534 for a loss of 1.29%; juvenile circulation 311 for an increase of 38.22%. Total was 845 for an overall increase of 10.31%.

July 1964--September 1965: Gold Hill adult circulation 1,604; juvenile circulation, 1562 for a total of 3232. This was a 4.11% increase in adult and a 48.62% in juvenile with an overall increase of 31.73%.

Requests to Medford for books were: September 1964; Gold Hill, 7. September 1965; Gold Hill, 18. July 1964--September 1964; Gold Hill, 43. July 1965--September 1965; Gold Hill, 39. This was an 14.70% increase for Gold Hill.

During September 1965 there were 3,473 books at the Gold Hill Library. 216 books were sent to Gold Hill with 207 books returned to Medford. Total books at the end of September in the Gold Hill Library were 3,482.

During September 1965, 231 patrons checked out books at the Gold Hill Library.

Jimmy Wakely will headline the entertainment at the first annual Home & Decorator Show at the Medford Armory which starts tomorrow night through Sunday, October 24. Besides the many outstanding and interesting exhibits there will be continuous entertainment.

JACK'S PLACE

THAT HEARTLESS WORLD

Oh, yes, I'm it -- that heartless world
You've oft times heard about --
Round which poetic tongues have twirled
To rudely bawl me out
Because I chuckle at your wit
When you've a joke to crack,
But should you chance to groan a bit --
You must excuse my back.

Yet even poets -- Bless their hearts!
Don't see it all sometimes,
And, viewing only scattered parts,
Grow partial with their rhymes.
They fail to note that when you're blue
You too, seek life and fun;
Nor do they see I've troubles, too --
Ten billion to your one!

I've sorrows all along the way
Each minute of the week.
How many tears for me today
Have trickled down your cheek?
You're right there at my comic shows;
You read my "funnies" through;
But sickness, sorrow, kindred woes
Have little charm for you.

The point is: You're a part of me;
I'm you and millions more.
That jolly smile we love to see
Because our hearts are sore.
So, let us doff our Stetsons, then,
To that brave scout and true
Who meets us with a cheery grin
And bears his burdens, too.

Water Movement, Level Affect Fish Embryo Growth

OREGON STATE UNIVERSITY—Growth of steelhead trout and coho salmon embryos are slowed by low oxygen concentrations in the stream and significantly affected by the swiftness of the water movement, a prize-winning Oregon State University research report reveals.

At all oxygen concentrations tested, reduced water velocities resulted in reduced size of hatching fry.

The paper by Dean L. Shumway, Charles E. Warren and Peter Doudoroff has won the top national award as the best scientific paper published during the past year in the Transactions of the American Fisheries Society.

Shumway and Warren are faculty members in the OSU Department of Fisheries and Wildlife. Doudoroff is a U. S. Public Health Service scientist stationed at OSU to do fisheries and water pollution research. The work of the two groups is combined within the Pacific Cooperative Water Pollution and Fisheries Research Laboratories on campus.

Chart Oxygen
In the study, the scientists charted the influence of oxygen concentration and water movement on the growth of trout and salmon embryos.

They found that fry from embryos reared at low and intermediate oxygen concentrations hatched later and were smaller than fry from embryos reared at concentrations near the air-saturation level. The findings point up a detrimental effect of stream pollution—which reduces oxygen content—on fish life.

The effect of water velocity was nearly as pronounced at high oxygen concentrations as at low concentrations, the scientists report. Water movement is believed to promote growth by delivering oxygen to the embryos. It may also remove some metabolic waste products that can retard embryonic growth, or perhaps even some special growth-regulating dissolved substance, the three experts conclude.

Glass Beads
Some of the embryos were buried in glass beads so as to simulate natural conditions more closely. Fry that hatched in the cylinders containing beads were larger in size than those without. This effect is ascribed to the increase of water velocities around the embryos buried in beads.

It appears though, the paper notes, that the hatching time does not vary simply with the growth rate of the embryos, increasing as growth rate decreases. The relation between them is not yet clear, and considerable more research will be required before the condition is fully understood, it was indicated.

The comparisons were made in special apparatus, located at the Oak Creek Laboratory near Corvallis, in which conditions of oxygen concentration, water velocity, and temperature can be controlled.

Medford High Band To Play At Kezar
The 100-piece Medford High School Band has accepted an invitation from San Francisco to perform at the half-time of the 49er-Ram football game at Kezar Stadium, Nov. 21.

The game will be televised in this area.

The trip is being financed by band students and the existing band travel fund. The band will leave Medford early on Nov. 20, stay at the Drake Wiltshire Hotel that night, perform for the crippled children at the Shriner's Hospital Sunday morning, play at the game that afternoon and return home by early Monday morning.

The group, plus chaperones, will travel on three Greyhound buses.

EDUCATION SECRETARIES
Recognized leaders in both the education and legislative fields are scheduled to address Southern Oregon school secretaries during a regional meeting of the Oregon Association of Educational Secretaries Nov. 13 in Klamath Falls. Heading the list of speakers will be Representative Carroll Howe and Dr. Winston Purvien, president of Oregon Technical Institute, Klamath Falls. The meeting will be held at Lucile O'Neill School.

PHARMACISTS SEMINAR
An all-day seminar on changing trends and events in the pharmacy profession will be held in the auditorium of Salem General Hospital on Nov. 13 for members of the Oregon Society of Hospital Pharmacists. The seminar is being offered by the Oregon pharmaceutical society in cooperation with the Division of Continuing Education, State System of Higher Education, and the school of pharmacy of Oregon State University.

Portable 'Bath'
Tuck those pretreated washcloths in the car glove compartment, desk or purse, for quickie pick-ups away from home.

Old Ceremony
The ceremony of the blessing of household animals dates back to the 14th century, when pets and representative field animals were taken into the churches to be blessed in dedication to St. Francis of Assisi.

Big Cavern Room
Nearly one-third of the population of the United States could be contained in the "Big Room" of New Mexico's Carlsbad Caverns, if people could be packed like sardines.

Can Cause Discomfort
Some women insist on wearing every bracelet they own. A moment's thought about their clanking, jangling costume jewelry may encourage some to cut down on the number.
