CAPITAL BRIEFS

FEDERAL JOB FINDER—Rep. Bob Wilson (R-Calif.) says, "After an intensive two month drive against joblessness in Chicago, by the Labor Department, 1951 jobless workers were located in a house-to-house canvass, 432 were referred to urban opportunity centers, 45 were eligible for training and only 9 got jobs. That works out to one-half of 1 per cent of the same for two months or 3 per cent a year." He added, "It will take more than 30 years to retrain and find work for the one million Americans covered by the program."

DEFICITS—According to Rep. George H. Mahon (D-Tex.), the eleven Federal administrative budgets between 1955 and 1965 projected a total deficit of $13.2 billion. Instead, he told Congress, the final deficit figure for the period was $43.1 billion. He estimates that revenues in the eleven fiscal years fell short of January budget predictions by $8.4 billion—while spending in these years exceeded estimates by $21.5 billion.

FOREST SERVICE
Intensification of forest management practices on the Big Butte Springs Watershed, which supplies water to the city of Medford, was made increasingly evident recently when personnel of the Rogue River National Forest completed the installation of a series of rustic signs on the 23,000 acre tract. The sign program was included in the 1964 management plan for the watershed prepared jointly by the U.S. Forest Service and the City of Medford.

It is the intention of this program to instill in the forest traveler an awareness of the resource management task on the watershed and to indicate ways in which the public may help to insure the continued production of pure, uncontaminated water, James C. Overbay, Butte Falls District Ranger stated.

Three types of signs have been installed. Entering and leaving signs on all primary and secondary roads traversing the area designate the boundaries of the lake flows which compose the watershed on the slopes of Mt. McLoughlin.

Signs located at the Willow Lake turnoff and at Whiskey Springs picnic area briefly explain the geologic history of the land and its importance as a source of domestic water.

With the recent boom in outdoor recreation, watershed managers have become increasingly concerned over the possibility of contamination of Big Butte Springs water. To alleviate a potential source of pollution, the forest service is in the process of converting the present Whiskey Springs campground to a picnic area, and constructing a new 40 unit campground on adjacent lands off the watershed. A sign placed in the picnic area warns the recreationist to place all trash and waste material in disposal facilities, and that overnight camping will not be permitted.

Mr. Overbay urged that persons using the area this Summer be tolerant to construction activities and co-operate with forest officials to facilitate a smooth transition from camping to picnicking use.

Saved by a Button
A coat button once saved the life of George Frederick Handel, the famous composer. In his youth, Handel and another musician fought a duel and Handel's life was saved because his opponent's sword struck a button on his coat.
