FISHING IN OREGON

Fishing is great sport in the State of Oregon. Nearly a half million anglers are licensed annually and the number is increasing each year.

Oregon is fortunate in having more than 15,000 miles of fishing streams and hundreds of lakes. The streams range from large, slow, meandering lowland rivers to bouldered, rushing, mountain brooks. The lakes vary in size from those covering thousands of acres to quiet forested ponds that can be spanned by a good caster.

Although much of the fishing water is on public lands, a considerable portion is bounded by land in private ownership and permission must be obtained from the land-owner to fish from the bank.

Information to follow is brief and of a general nature. No effort has been made to detail all of the angling opportunities. It may be generally stated, however, that sport fishing opportunities in Oregon include some type of outstanding angling throughout the entire year.

In addition to making continuous inventory of game fish, the Commission operates a number of hatcheries which produce annually 15 to 20 million trout and salmon. Of equal importance is the work done to improve fish habitat. The screening of irrigation and power diversions, stream clearance, construction of fish ladders, and chemical removal of undesirable fish populations are some of the activities aimed at making conditions more favorable for natural fish production. Providing public access to lakes and streams is another important fish management activity.

REGULATIONS

A synopsis of current angling regulations may be obtained by writing to the Oregon State Game Commission, P.O. Box 3503, Portland, Oregon 97208 or may be picked up at any hunting and fishing license outlet. The synopsis includes information on license fees, seasons, bag and length limits, closed waters, special seasons, and a small map depicting regulation zones into which the state has been divided.

Changes in the regulations are made each year, but certain general principles follow. Summer trout season opening date varies from the middle of April to late May, depending on locality. Warm-water game fish such as bass, catfish, crappie, and perch may be angled for throughout the year. Late fall, winter, and early spring fishing is confined primarily to steelhead and salmon. The synopsis should always be consulted for detailed regulations.

The Rogue River system, in southwestern Oregon is the other major drainage heading in the Cascades and flowing to the ocean. The Rogue was made famous by Zane Grey and other writers and still retains much of its glamour although industrial and agricultural developments have changed the fishing picture somewhat from earlier days. Principal fisheries are for chinook salmon, silver salmon, steelhead, resident rainbow and cut-throat trout.

Thirty-four other states in the nation have as much or more rainfall than the overall average of Oregon. Twenty-four states have as much or more rainfall than the Willamette Valley in Oregon. (The difference lies in the fact that they do not complain about it.) There are 8 states with cities having higher annual rainfall than Portland over the past 30 years.

There are over 250 events, such as festivals, rodeos, etc. held in Oregon every year. The world's largest strawberry shortcake is baked each year at Lebanon, Oregon. It weighs over three tons.

The Mt. Hood, Oregon area is used by more ski and snow enthusiasts than any other in the U. S.

Oregon has the only two baby elephants born in the U. S. in over 40 years.

Oregon City, Oregon is the only city in the nation with a municipal elevator to carry its citizens from one street level to another.

The only sea-lion rookery on the North American mainland is on the Oregon coast. The world's largest wooden structure is the old dirigible hangar at Tillamook.
