

FARM POINTERS

Hardy annuals are set out in Oregon from April 15 until it is too late for them to make a good growth, the experiment station says. Tender annuals are not planted outdoors until May 10. These dates are used at the college in making plantings of annuals for the season.

Lime is needed in many Oregon gardens, says the experiment station. The soil is often too acid for good growth and an addition of lime remedies this trouble. Some plants require soil conditions different from others. Find out what the plant needs and try to make the soil the best for that plant, is the advice of W. S. Brown, professor of horticulture at the college.

Strawberry crown borers in Oregon are controlled by burning infested plants in the spring. Old plantings that will not produce a crop this year serve as breeding grounds for the moths. These are plowed up and the plants burned. New plantings are located as far away as possible from the old field.

The soaking of narcissus bulbs for three hours in water at 110 degrees F. will not obtain 100 per cent results in combating stem and leaf nematodes, says M. B. McKay (plant pathologist at the Oregon agricultural experiment station. Mr. McKay is experimenting with local-grown golden spur narcissus bulbs, soaking them at 110, 112, 114, and 116 degrees. The bulbs soaked at 116 degrees grew as well as those at 110. The best temperature has not been determined, but the heat is increased above the standard treatment to obtain best results.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The second six weeks period of the second semester will come to a close tomorrow, leaving only six more weeks of school. For the past two days examinations have been given in all subjects enabling the teachers to get an average grade for the six weeks. The cards will probably be issued to the students Monday.

One tennis net, two baseballs, one baseball mask and a bat were added to the high school athletic equipment, according to Scott Hamilton, athletic manager.

All previous records for editing and printing the "Central Pointer," the semi-monthly official publication of the Central Point high school, were shattered Friday. The staff issued the paper in one day. By waiting until the last day before printing the paper it is possible to get the very latest news for the students, says Donald Wilson, editor of the publication.

Claude Grisby, class of '24, was here Monday afternoon looking his old class rooms over and going to classes with his friends.

A fifteen minute Underwood typing speed and accuracy test was given to four typing students in front of the student body and faculty last week preparatory to the typing contest held at Medford Saturday. Fay Love, Typing II; Dorothy Martin, Typing IV; Lena Armstrong, Typing II, and Roger von der Hellen, Typing II were the students taking the tests.

WHAT 1800 FAMILIES KNOW ABOUT ELECTRIC COOKING

THEY will tell you it is a new kind of luxury —one that doesn't cost more to enjoy.

Of course you have always appreciated the advantages of cooking by electricity. You know that it means no more fuel to carry; no more ashes to lug. You know that electricity is the ideal cooking heat; economical because it is turned on when you need it—not before; turned off when you're through—not later.

But perhaps you would like to know exactly what it costs—in dollars and cents. The 1800 satisfied families who now use electric ranges served with electricity by this company would gladly show you their bills, if they could.

We have made an average of these bills, so that we may give you the facts. The average cost of electric lights alone in all homes served by this company in Oregon is $2.20 a month. The average cost of their electric lights and electric cooking together is $5.62 a month.

For the difference, could you buy ordinary fuel for cooking? And if you could, would you want to? Whenever you decide to investigate this question of electric cooking closely, your nearest dealer will tell you many interesting things. And he is prepared to install your new electric range at once, on convenient terms.
